Baseball Notes.

At Garfield Park, Weymouth, yesterday afternoon, the Weymouth high school team easily defeated Braintree high school 4 to 1. Gardner, Gloster and Munroe

Brown line-up against Princeton last Sat- Cummings. urday at Providence. Brown won easily 8 to 1. Loud failed to get a hit and had but one chance in the field. "Reg." Nash also failed to hit safely and his only chance in the field resulted in a error elected the following officers:

Dudie O'Dowd is making the Brockton fans sit up and take notice with his stellar work at second base in the practice games thus far this year. Leo is in fine shape and the best season in his career is predicted for the South Weymouth boy. "Vince" Gorman, the "kid" second up a great game in the field and is picking up fast in his stick work under Coach

Carters coaching. The Stetson Shoe nine is all signed up and the boys are allready for the tap of the gong next month. A long schedule carts yesterday, has been arranged and Manager Hazelton is of the opinion, that the other semi-pro teams in this vicinity will have to travel at top form to defeat his aggregation.

The Weymouth high boys will experience the sensation of playing on a real league park to-morrow when they play Brockton High on the New England grounds on Center street Brockton. Earl Bates, the star short stop of the Norfolks last season will cover the short field for Stetson Shoe this year.

In regard to the Weymouth high school vs Brockton high base ball game to be played at Brockton tomorrow afternoon, the Brockton Enterprise of last Monday has the following to say :- "One of the hardest games on the Brockton schedule will come Saturday, when the local boys play Weymouth high on the Center street grounds. Weymouth always has a fast aggregation on the field and Brockton will have to travel in good style to take them into camp. Last year Brockton won from Weymouth at home and lost the game that was played at Weymouth."

The horse, above all other creatures, is entitlep to the kind consideration of his at best, as he is confined in his actions and is often made uncomfortable by sore feet, sore shoulders, chafing harnesses or by the ill temper of his driver. One who can not be kind to horses should not be allowed the privilege of driving them.

The incessant and continuous drain on a brood sow, when suckling a large litter of pigs, is such a drain on her system that is creates an appetite that will require generous feeding for the good of the sow, pigs and the man that contemplates getting quick returns from them.

In the matter of feeding, too much care can not be exercised, as on the ability of the horse to properly assimilate into his system the feed he eats depends his usefulness. So far as can be done he should be given that which is the easiest digested so that all the nutritious parts will be absorbed into his system and go to make flesh, bone and fiber.

With poultry of all kinds, it is evident that only healthy and vigorous birds will make a profit for the owners. Heavy milk production with dairy cows has been secured by selecting heifers of the strong-Contractor and Builder? est and best producing cows. It is not as easy with poultry as with cows to make careful selections, yet a certain amount of care must be exercised if the vigor of the flock and a large egg yield are to be established and maintained

> The depth at which potatoes should be planted is a matter of considerable importance, and one upon which much difference of opinion exists. Some growers advocate shallow planting and others just as strongly favor deep planting. An experiment was made at Iron River, Wis., on sandy soil of rather open texture, to get some information on this point. Rows were planted 4, 6 and 8 inches deep. Exactly the same treatment as to cultivating, spraying, etc., was given to all the rows. The potatoes planted four inches deep yielded at the rate of 140 bushels per acre; the six-inch depth yielded at the rate of 124 bushels per acre, and the eight-inch depth 102 bushels per acre.

When we plant a tree we are doing what we can to make our planet a more wholeome and happier dwelling place for those who come after us, if not for ourselves. I have written many verses, but the best poems I have produced are the trees I have planted on the hillside. Nature finds rhymes for them in the recurring measures of the seasons, winter strips them of their ornaments and gives them, as it were, in prose translation, and summer reclothes them in all the splendid phrases of their leafy language.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

proof than this woman's word? Mrs. F. J Reid, 81 West street, Whitman, Mass, says:-"After suffering for many years from kidney complaint and spending a great amount of money for medicine without being helped, I was gratified when Doan's Kidney Pills cured me so quickly. The pains in my back never ceased and I could not sleep well, getting up in the morning as tired as when I went to bed. I had begun to look bad and was growing despondent when I happened to read about Doan's Kidney Pills. Procuring a supply at Hovey's drug store, I began using them and the contents of three boxes cured me."

The above statement was given on October 6, 1908, and when Mrs. Reid was interviewed later, she said:-"I have no reason to change my high opinion Doan's Kidney Pills and I willingly corfirm my former statement. I use this remedy occasionally and am always bene-

How Paint.

The first cost of a good job of paint— Devoe—is $50 (average size, of course). The first cost of a second or third or fourth rate job, $55 to $100. The wear is likewise. The better you paint, of course, the longer it wears. And the more you pay for your job, the shorter it wears!

Devoe is one of a dezen good paints. There are hundreds of bad ones. As likely as not, Devoe is the only good one in this town.

The Fellow That Makes Us Laugh. We crown the great artists with laurel

And sing to them paeans of praise; We banquet the makers of cities And lift them to fame in our lays. But I want to pay one little tribute-Less gaudy than earnest by half-And I want to send my wreath of roses To the fellow that makes us laugh! You know how it is who have labored, And worried and fretted, all day, To meet with, in person or paper, The fellow who laughs it away; Who takes us when least we expect it And turns us from sorrow to cheer, With a twist of his thought that's so funny

Our troubles at once disappear. I tell you, he's worth all the ages Can give him of praise and of love,

Who has halped us to look out of trouble To the peace of the blue skies above; And to feel that no matter what happens We'll do all we can to go on With our hope and our faith on the promise

Of a better day surely to dawn. He may not put pence in our purses, Nor help us grow wealthy and grand,

But he 'eaches us all our reverses Are lessons that help us to stand In the face of the blight and the battle And go forth again to the fray With a spirit of sunshine and laughter That will chase every trouble away.

Oh, here's to the king and the captain. And here's to the soldiers in line: And here's to the man in the paper-I think I can see his eyes shine-The actor, the artist, the genius, Whoever he is, with his chaff-

Chinese Paper Money.

Paper money is said to have had its origin in China in the year 806, when the government issued it to relieve a financial stringency, receiving coin bers was given by Miss Ethel F. Rayin return, which enabled it to pay off outstanding obligations. In the museum of St. John's college in Shanghai is a paper bill worth 1,000 cash, the equivalent of 50 cents American money, which was issued by the first the hostess. Miss Margaret Howe and Ming Emperor (Hung-wu A. D. 1368- Miss Ruth Wright were the pourers. 1399). It is nearly two feet long and one foot wide, printed on mulberry bark paper, and is a dark slate color. -Argonaut.

Tonic Laughter.

There is no spice like laughter at laugh stimulates the circulation, promotes digestion, and enlivens every vital organ. It is, in short, a sort of shower bath of the spirit, invigorating the whole man, at ! it is the cheapest luxury at our command. Moreover, cheerfulness is largely a matter of habit, and there is nothing that yields larger returns for the effort involved.

CHAPTER VII. The Night

UT breakfast passed and no Jeanne appeared. From the great house came no sounds of human occupancy. It was with a sense of relief that at length Joseph-'ne heard a human voice.

Outside, beneath the window, quavering sounds rose. The words were French, Canadian French, scarce distinguishable to an ear trained only in the old world. It was an old man sing-

The words came to her with a sudgen thrill. What did they not mean to the alien, to the prisoner, to the outtast, anywhere in the world!

She stepped to the window and looked down. An old man, brown, bent and wrinkled, was digging about the shrubbery. Josephine leaned out and softly joined in the refrain:

"Give me back my native land or take my life away!" The old man dropped his spade and looked all about, around, then at

She looked about her hastily. "I'm here against my wish. Eleazar. I want to get away from here as soon as I can. Do you like money, Eleazar?"

"Of course yes. Every one likes money."

"Then listen, Eleazar. Some day we will walk, perhaps. How far is it to Cape Girardeau, where the French people live?"

"Good morning." he said. "You have. I hope, slept well Have you and Eleazar here planned any way to escape as yet?" He smiled at her grimiy. Fleazar had shuffled away.

You intruded too soon." 'At least you are frank, then! You

She broke out into a torrent of hot speech. He did not seem to hear her He turned swiftly and left her, so that she found left unsaid certain questions as well as certain accusations she had stored for this first meeting.

That night Josephine St. Auban did not sleep. For hours she tossed about. listening. Infrequently sounds came to her ears. Once in awhile a distant step resounded in the great building, or again there came the distant voices of the negroes singing in their quarters relief came over Josephine. Now, she beyond The house had ceased its daily activities The servants had left it. Who occupied it now? Was she alone?

Was there one other? Josephine rose, passed to the window and looked out. The moonlight lay upon the lawn like a broad silver blanket. Faint stars were twinkling in the clear sky overhead The dark outlines of the shrubbery below showed black and strong Upon the side of a nearby clump of leatless illacs shone a faint right, as though from one of the barred windows below. The house was not quite asleep She stilled her breath as she might, stilled her beart as she might lest its beating should be heard What was about to happen? Where could she fly and how?

Escape by the central stairway would be out of the question, because by that war only could dauger approach She seamed out of the window. Catching at the coarse ivy vine which climbed up the old wall of the house she saw that it ascended past her window to the very cornice where the white pillars joined the root The pillars themselves, vast and smooth would have been useless even could she have reached them. Below a siender attice or indder had been erected to the neight of one story to give the tvy its support. She clutched at the ivy desperately. It seemed to her that, although the smaller tendrils loosened. the greater arms held firm.

She stepped back into the room and distened At last there came a footfall Was it true? It seemed not beavy enough for a man's step, but a man on secret errand might trend light. She flung herself upon the bed, her hands clasped, her lips moving in supplica-

But now it came again. That was it. It was a footfall. It approached along the hall, paused at the barricaded door It was there outside, stopping. She beard a breath drawn The knob was tried, silently at first, then with greater force. "Who is there?" she quavered. "Who is there?" she repeated No answer came.

"Jennne!" she cried aloud "Oh. Jeanne! Jeanne! Sally!"

There was a sound of a distant door opening. No voice came. Outside her own door now was silence.

She could endure no more. Though it were into flames, she must escape from this place. Half clad as she was, she ran to the window and unhesitatingly let herself out over the sill. clutching at the ivy as she did so.

As she now half slid from the window she grasped wildly at the screen of ivy and, as fate would have it. caught one of its greater branches. It held fast, and she swung free from the sill, which now she could never again regain She clung desperately, blindly, swung out, then felt the roots of the tvy above her rip free, one after another, far up, almost to the cornice. The lady's arm is broken." "Pardon, monsieur," he began, "but it is far for St. Genevieve. Me, I have set arm before now. Suppose I set heem now, then go for the doc?"

"Could you do that?" demanded Dunwody. "Somehow, yes, me," answered Eleazar. Dunwody nodded. Without further speech the old man rolled up his sleeves and addressed himself to his task. His patient made no sound of suffering. She only panted, like a frightened bird held in the hand, al though the sobbing of Jeanne filled the room. The forehead of Dunwod! was beaded. He said nothing, not even when they had finished all they

There was a strange gentleness in his voice. "You're hurt. It would be impossible for you to go now. Don't be afraid. Don't, don't!" She looked at him keenly in spite of her suffering There seemed some change about him. At length, heavily, his head sunk, he left the room.

Jeanne herself, sobbing, tearful, withal overjoyed, rejoined her mistress. The two embraced as was best possible. As her senses cleared, a sort of began to reason; for the time she was shielded by this infirmity

"But. Jeanne, I am belpless. We must wait now."

All that night and till morning of the next day they waited alone, Dunwody not appearing, though continually old Sally brought up proofs of his solich tousness. At last there came the sound of boofs on the gravel road, and there alighted at the door, dust covered and weary, old Eleazer and Jamieson, the doctor of St. Genevieve These were met by the master of Tallwoods him

"Listen now, Jamieson," said Dunwody. "You're here by my call Ask no questions. Your patient has broken an arm-there has been an accident.

It Pays To Buy Good Things

Glenwood Gas Ranges are built for service, and to give the utmost satisfaction to the user. In the first place, they weigh more and are put together more securely than most gas ranges. The castings are smooth, and easy to keep clean. Owing to their sturdy construction and fine workman-ship, they will stand the intense heat and last much longer than the ordinary kind.

The Cooking Top is supplied with five burners, three ordinary size, one extra large and one simmering burner. Pilot cocks and burner cocks are at the front of range, and light from in front, safe and sure.

The Baking Oven is big enough to bake for the the largest family, and every square inch is heated exactly uniform.

The Linings of the Oven are made of white alumaloyd sheets, a new rust-resisting metal which does not scale, but keeps neat and smooth and lasts with the rest of the range. The bottom and side linings of both broiling and baking ovens are a bar-locking, removable type, securely fastened, but very easy to take out.

The Glenwood Patent Oven Heat Indicator is dependable, and what gas range users have long been looking for.

"Glenwood Range" is to-day a household word the country over and the standard for cooking and baking wherever sold.

He led the way to the door of Josephine's room, and the doctor, stained with travel as he was, entered. He was an old man, gray and lean, consumed in his time by fevers and chills, in the treatment of which he was perhaps more skillful than in surgery. The face turned toward him, framed in its dark roll of hair, caused him to start with surprise. Even thus flushed in the fever of pain it seemed to him no face ever was more beautiful. Who was she? How came she here? In spite of Dunwody's command many questions sprang to his mind, almost to his lips. Yet now he only gently took up the bandaged arm. "Pardon, my dear," he said quietly. "I must unwrap these bandages to see how well Eleazar has done his work. You know we doctors are jealous of each other. F course you will wear pumps this season. Nothing equals a pump to set off a pretty foot. And Nothing so surely conceals a pretty foot as a pump that doesn't fit.

Be particular about the fit. See that the pump hugs firmly above the heel, and clings snugly to the side and doesn't bulge.

These are the features you are sure to find in the American Lady Shoe. The natural grace, snap and style of the pump remains after the newness is worn off.

This is a sure sign of quality—the result of forty years of eareful shoe making.

Ouick Wit and Nerve Saves Two Children.

While riding a horse along Broad street in East Weymouth on Tuesday Ellsworth Curtis, a nervy lad of 15 years, was startled by a run-away team with two little children about 5 years of age in the wagon. Grasping the situation at a glance, Curtis put his horse to a run along side of the flying team, leaped from his horse to the fast going wagon, climbed out onto the frightened runaway and brought him to a stand, thus saving the two little ones fromserious injury, if not death.

In spite of the use of chemical extinguishers and gravel and sand, the machine was totally ruined. "Back firing" is supposed to have caused the blaze, making a loss of about $2,000, partially covered by insurance.

There was only a small amount of gasoline in the car at the time of the fire, which fact accounted for the one slight explosion that took place. Only two wheels were left that were of any value. Mr. Bascom was in the nouse when the flie started.

Baseball Notes.

That ninth inning rally by Weymouth H. S. at Brockton last Saturday was worth going miles to see. Ray Condrick and Gloster delivered in the pinches in fine style all right.

"Dudie" O'Dowd is playing a great game at second for Brockton in the "little old New England league" this year. His work has been the sensation of the league thus far.

The Twilight league of teams from the several shoe factories in town will open its season on May 20.

An umpire's job at the best is decidedly uppleasant and without doubt in the majority of the cases the "ump" gives the decision as he sees the play, but there were many rooters at the Brockton vs Weymouth game last Saturday, and Brockton fans too, who questioned. Umpire Conley's eyesight in calling a balk on Ray Condrick in the ninth inning. Conley's work was a little off color all during Fee, c the game and Brockton suffered fully as Magner, ss much as Weymouth however.

"Reg" Nash and Carl Loud were in the Brown line-up against Yale last Saturday. Yale won 4 to 2, defeating Brown Richards, if for the first time this year. Loud failed to get a safe hit, but "lteg" connected for one safety.

"Arbie" Dam, last year with the C. M. A. and Norfolk teams, is pitching for the Dewey's of Weymouth this year.

Baldwin, the Brockton coach, was caught napping last Saturday when "Toby" Fraher and Condrick got on to his signal for a squeeze play and nipped McGlincey between third and home when Ray pitched one so close to Doten that he couldn't possibly bunt. It was a pretty double play on Weymouth's part.

The Hunt school of Weymouth easily defeated the Bates school nine of South Weymouth at Garfield park, Weymouth, last Tuesday afternoon Langford, the captain of the Ward 3 nine was the star of the game. The batteries were Dwyer and Lukeman for the Hunt school team and Holbrook, Campbell and Reilly for the losers.

64th ANNUAL.

Large Crowd And Pleasing Program At Universalist Society Affair In South Weymouth Last Friday Even-

With an extra fine evening, a large audience and a most pleasing program, the sixty-fourth annual May party of the Universalist Society of South Weymouth was held in Fogg's Opera House South Weymouth, last Friday evening.

The first part of the entertainment program consisted of orchestral selections by an orchestra of which Mace Gay was the leader.

In the second part the operetta in one act "Mrs. Bouncer's Boaders," adopted and arranged by Philip Greely from the famous operetta "Cox and Box" was presented very pleasingly by the following South Weymouth talent : Mary Ann Bouncer, a widow, Annie Deane; Penelope Ann Bouncer, her daughter, Annie S. Greely; James John Box, a journeyman printer, Charles F. Brown; John James Cox, a journeyman hatter, Philip Greely;

Margaret Howe, Accompanist. All the parts were very well carried out and Miss Howe made a delightful accompanist.

Following this feature, the floor was cleared and order of sixteen dances begun with Mace Gay's eight piece orchestra furnishing music

At eleven o'clock intermission was declared and ices and fancy cakes were served by a committee of young men. The floor director was Kenneth Brennan, assisted by J. Leonard Bicknell. The aids were Nathaniel Thomas, Alfred . Loud, Elliott O. Veszie, Ralph W Thomas and Calvin F. Veazie.

At one o'clock the last waltz was played farewells were said and the merry-makers departed for their homes after expressing heir intention of being on hand in 1914 for the 65th annual of the Universalist

Large Audience at First of Series of Services in Congregational Church, East Weymouth, Last Sunday Evening.

In the East Weymouth Congregational church last Sunday evening, the first of a series of vesper services to be held each succeeding Sunday night, was conducted before an extra large audience.

A surpliced choir of female voices in cap and gown, under the direction of Miss-Grace W. Mitchell, sang and marched the processional, led the hymn singing and gave special selections.

Rev. Walter H. Commons conducted the devotional services and Miss Isabelle Commons' sermon was on the theme, 'Lessons From Royal Councilors." The members of the choir were Miss Susie Humprey, Miss Helen Marray, Miss Adella Rix, Miss Alice Morse, Miss Beatrice Denbroeder, Miss Olive Studley, Miss Mildred Newcomb, Miss Mary Garey, Miss Grace Taylor, Miss Marion Cook, Miss Theodora Keith, Miss Marjorie Keith, Miss Alice Fisher, Miss Helen Lincoln and Miss Evelyn Nash.

> Kindness with colts is a matter of business as well as sentiment. The only sure way of making a perfect dispositioned horse is to completely win his confidence. Having won his confidence, you are in a position to do almost whatever you please with the animal. The colt that likes you will willing serve you.

Cotton-seed meal is so much richer in protein than bran, shorts and other cow concentrates that it is relatively the cheapest concentrated protein feed that can be used for diary purposes. With a silo, cotton-seed meal is fed mixed with silage, as it is too rich to feed alone. Without silage, it is mixed with wheat protein content, cotton-seed meal has a very high manurial value.

Agriculture has become a science, and no unscientific methods can succeed in these days of such close competition. New discoveries are constantly being nade, and the modern farmer must keep up with the times if he wants to succeed There is no better way in which he can keep up with the times than by reading Prices Low current agricultural literature.

Farmers, of all people, have the prerogis not all big crops, fine live stock and money in the bank. It is more than these, The country home should be the prominent theme of every farmer. Our country homes are much better than they were in days gone by, but they still can be made much better and more beautiful. The No mistakes or disputes house itself is not the home, but the family, the house and the grounds about the house. No-where are conditions more favorable than on the farm for beautiful

Roots, like the upper branches of a plant, have main parts and offshoots The root system in form and size is similiar to the upper stem system of the plant. It is like the upper part of the forward is done, by the young, tende shoots. The root itself does no work of absorbing liquid food, but it is provided with a very large number of thread-like organs, called "root hairs," and these are the organs which really do all of this important underground work for the plant

There are several distinct advantages in growing pole beans over the bush varieties, especially where poles can easily and cheaply be secured. In many sections, however, poles are very scarce; hence, the poling of the bean crop would cost more than the extra advantages are worth. But in many sections, poles are very easy to secure, costing nothing but the work of cutting them. On many farms they may be secured along brushy fence rows or other brushy places, the cutting away of the brush resulting in the clearing of valuable ground.

We are repeatedly asked, "What are you going to say about dust this week?" In answer to that here is what we have to say. From Grape Island to the Thicket and Rockland line; from the Hingham line on one side and the Braintree line on the other, everybody in town knows more about dust than they did two weeks ago, as they have had dust at the right of them and the left of them; in front of them and behind them; above them and below them; on them and in them; and there we might stop, but that would not few days last week, be a satisfactory answer to many-the why of it is what the majority of people want to know and we proceed to explain. The water precipitation in April was unusually heavy and consequently the road shrfaces more than usually soft and as the days of slow ox-teams and light carriages have gone by and heavy automobiles taken their places, the road surface became ground fine. The wet season has been followed by a couple of weeks of dry weather and of course the natural sequela followed viz .- dust and street cars and automobiles moving from 20 to 60 miles an hour are much more potent factors in stirring up dust than a three miles an hour ox-team. Now does any one want to know why there has been no water cart, oiling of streets or other means used to relieve the situation, we can only say we don't know

TENT CATERPILLAR.

The road gang, the moth gang, clean-up gang and individuals in general might do a much worse thing than devote tomorrow, Saturday, to the burning of tent caterpillars of which there seems to be a superabundance this year and the next two or three days will be important ones for foliage fruit and comfort.

OF course you will wear pumps this season. Nothing equals a pump to set off a pretty foot. And Nothing so surely conceals a pretty foot as a pump that doesn't fit.

Be particular about the fit. See that the pump hugs firmly above the heel, and clings snugly to the side and doesn't bulge.

These are the features you are sure to find in the American Lady Shoe.

The natural grace, snap and style of the pump remains after the newness is worn off.

This is a sure sign of quality—the result of forty years of careful shoe making.

The Garments of Another.

DON'T like this, Dunwody," he said, when they were out of earshot of the room. "What's going on here? I'm your doctor, as we both know, but I'm your friend too. And we both know that I'm a gentleman, and you ought to be. I've helped you before, and I've held your secrets, making any more secrets, d'ye see?"

"There aren't going to be any more, Jamieson," rejoined Dunwody slowly. her well, that's all. This is no place well, there isn't any place anywhere for me."

The old doctor sighed. "Brace up to ft, my son, but play the game fair. If it comes to a case of being kind to yourself or kind to a woman, why, take a gamble and try being kind to the woman."

Dunwody for the time left him and began moodily to pace apart, up and down the gallery. Here presently he was approached by Jeanne, the maid. "Madam will speak to you," announced that person loftily and turned away scornfully before he had time to

Josephine pushed herself back against the head board of the bed, half supported by pillows. "Jeanne." she said, "go to the wardrobe yonder. Bring me what you find there. Wait." she added to Dunwody. "I've something to show you, something to ask Jeanne turned over her arm now the old and worn garments which Sally earlier had attempted to remove.

"What are these?" exclaimed Josephine. "Whose were they? You told me once you were alone here."

"I am." he answered. "Look! These are years old-years, years old." "What are they? Whose were they?"

"They are graveclothes." he said you wish to know more?" "Is she-was she-is she out there?"

He knew she meant to ask in the graveyard of the family. "Why do you wish to know?" he inquired quietly. "Is it because you are a woman?" "I am here because I am a woman. Well, then."

He looked at her, still silently, for a time. "She is dead." he said slowly. "Can't you let her lie dead?"

"No. Is she out there? Tell me." "No."

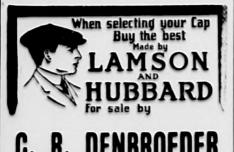

"Is she dead? Who was she?" "I have told you I am alone here. I

"It depends upon what you mean by the truth."

"The man who could do what you have done with me would not stop at anything. How could I believe a word you said?" Then on the instant, much as she had cause to hate him, she half regretted her speech. She saw a swift flush spring to his cheek under the thin florid skin.

"That isn't just," he said quietty. "I wouldn't lie to you, not even to get you. If that's the way you feel about me I reckon there couldn't, after all. be much between us. I've got all the sins and faults of the world, but not just that one. I don't lie."

"Then tell me." "No: you've not earned it What would be the use if you didn't believe what I said?"

He held up the faded things before his eyes, turning them over calmiy, looking at them directly, unshrinkingly. She could not read what was in his mind. Either he had courage or long accustomedness, she thought. "I asked Sally," she half smiled.

"Yes?"

"And I'll ask her again, I don't want-I can't have a-a room which belongs to another woman, which has belonged to another. I've not, all my but I don't go into the business of life, been used to-that sort of place myself, you see."

"You are entitled to first place. madam, wherever you are. I don't "I've got to keep hers. You needn't know what you have been." He pointkeep mine if you don't feel like it. Get ed to her own garments, which lay across a chair. "You don't know what for her. As for me, as you know very she has been"-he indicated these that he held in his hand. "Very well. What could a mere liar, a coward, do to arrange an understanding between two women so mysterious? You are the first woman for me. Is it not enough?" "I told Sally it might have been a sister, your mother"-"Dead long ago. Out there." He nodded to the window. "Which?" she demanded.

He turned to her full now and put out a hand, touching the coverlid timidly almost. "You are ill," he said. "Your eyes shine. I know. It's the fever. It isn't any time now for you to talk. Besides, until you believe me I cannot talk with you any more. I've been a little rough, maybe, I don't know, but as God made this world. those trees, that sun yonder, I never said a word to you yet that wasn't true."

"Will you tell me all about is-about her, some time?"

"If you are going away, why should you ask that? If you are going to be nothing to me in all the world, what right have you to ask that of me? You would not have the right I've had in speaking to you as I have. That was right. It was the right of love. I love you! I don't care if all the world knows it. Let that girl there hear if she likes. I've said we belong together, and it seems truth to me. the very truth; yes, and the very right itself. But some way we hurt each other, don't we? Look at you, there. suffering. My fault. And I'd rather it had cost me a limb than to see you burt that way. It cuts my heart. I can't rest over it. And you hurt me. too. I reckon, about as bad as anything can. Maybe you hurt me more than you know."

"You've not been much among women." she said. "You don't understand them." "I don't reckon anybody does."

"Jeanne told me that she heard last "Could it not have been a negro child?" He smiled at her, even as he stood under inquisition.

She noticed that his face now seemed pale. The bones of the cheeks stood out more now. He showed more gravity. Freed of his red fighting flush, the flame of passion gone out of more of a man than had hitherto been apparent to her.

"No, no." cried out Jeanne. "Eet was no neegaire child; not at all, never: I know those neegaire voice. It was a voice white, madame, monsieur. Apparently it wept. Perhaps it had hunger."

A sort of grim uncovering of his teeth was Dunwody's smile He made no comment. His face was whiter

"Whose child was it?" demanded Josephine. "Hers?"

"No." "Yours?"

"No." "Oh, well. I suppose it was some servant's, though the overseer, Jeanne says, lives across the fields there. And there would not be any negroes living here in the house in any case?"

"Was it-was it-yours?" "I have no child . There will never be any for me in the world-exceptunder"- But now the flush came back into his face. Confused, he turned and gently laid down the faded silks across a chair back. He shook his head and walked out of the room

All four got down, shook hands with Dunwody, gave their reins to servants and joined him on his invitation to enter Jamieson was known to all of

Hon. William Jones, "von didn't ex pert to see us so soon, did you? Reck on you'd ought to be all the glad-

"You live here, my dear colonel," he tontinued, looking about him, "in much the same state and seclusion remarked by Mr. Gibbon in his immortal work on the decline and fall of Rome-where he described the castles of them antient days, located back in the mounlamous regions. But it ain't no Roman and you've got out thar."

"I was going to remark," interrupt night a child crying here in this house." | Pd Judge Clayton, "that Colonel Dunwody has anticipated all the modern requirements of hospitality as well as embodied all those of ancient sort. Thank you, I shall taste your bour bon, colonel, with gladness. It is a long ride in from the river."

Their host looked at them for a moment "Are you here on any special his eyes, he seemed more dignified. Prrand? But of course there must be something of the sort to bring you two gentlemen so close on my trail."

"We met up with these gentlemen down at the river," began Yates, "and from what they done told us, we thought we'd all better ride in along together, and have a little talk with you. Looks like there might be trouble in these parts before long."

"What sort of trouble?" "It's this a-way," broke in the Hon. William Jones. "The jedge an" I laid off at Cairo when you all went on through. Next day, along comes a steamer from up river, an' she's full of northern men, headed west-more like a fightin' army than so many set tlers. They're goin' out into the prairie country beyant an' I think it's just on the early bird principle to hold it ag'inst settlers from this state They're a lot of those black abolitionists, that's what they are! What's more, that Lily gal of the Jedge's here. she's got away agin-she turned up missin' at Cairo, too-an' she is taken up with this bunch of Yankees an' is mighty apt to git clar off

Judge Clayton nodded gravely "The whole north is stirred up and bound to make trouble. These men seemed to have taken the girl in with out hesitation. They don't intend to stand by any compromise, at least The question is, what are we going to do about it? We can't stand here and see our property taken away by armed invaders in this way." Dunwody remained silent for a time. Dr. Jamieson took snuff and looked quietly from one to the other. "You can count me in, gentlemen." said he.

Silence fell as he went on. "If they mean fight, let them have fight. If we let in one army of abolitionists out here to run off our property, an other will follow.

"The south has been swindled all along the line." he exclaimed, rising and smiting a fist into a palm. "We got Texas, yes, but it had to be by war. We've been juggled out of California, which ought to have been a southern state. We are cut off from growth to the south by Mexico. On the west we have these Indians located. The whole upper west is air tight abolitionist by national law Now, where shall we go? These abolitionists are even wedging in west of Strange enough such speech sounds today. But as the gray headed old doctor went on he only voiced what was the earnest conviction of many of the ablest men of his time, both of the south and the north.

"The south has been robbed. We paid our share of the cost of this last war in blood and in money! We paid for the union! And now they deny as any share of it! Gentlemen, it's invasion, that's what it is, and that's my answer, so far as my honest conscience and all my wisdom go. It's war! What's the next thing to do? Judge, we can take back your girlthe legal right to do that is clear But we all know that that may be only a beginning."

The Hon. William Jones helped him self to whisky, altogether forget ting his principle of taking but one drink a day. "If them abolitionists would only stay at home we could af ford to sit quiet an' let 'em bowl; but when they come into our dooryard an begin to howl it's time somethin ought to be did. I 'low we'll have to fight."

"We will fight," said Dunwody slowly and gravely. "What boat are these men using?

asked Dr. Jamieson, turning to young "Little old scow named the Helen Bell She can't steam upstream a hundred miles a week. She ties up every night. We can easy catch her up above st Genevieve if we ride fast."

"That tooks feasible to me." remark ed Judge Clayton, and the others nodded their approval.

Judge Clayton dropped into a seat as he replaced his glass on the near est table "By the way, Colonel Dun wody," said he, "there was something right strange happened on the Vernon. coming down the Ohio, and I thought maybe you could help us figure it out There was another disappearance-that extraordinarily beautiful young lady who was there-you remember her? No one knew what became of her When I heard about that Lily girl's es cape. I sent my men with the two bucks on down home, with instructions for a little training, so they would not try the underground again right soon But now"-

"Now about that Lily girl," interrupted the Hon. William Jones, who had once more forgotten his temperance resolutions- "But, hello, colonel. what's this-wha-a-at's this?"

He picked up and exposed to view shell and silver, such as ladles some times used for fastening the hair.

"Somehow, I got the idea you was a bachelor man," went on the Hon. William cheerfully. "But looky here, now, what's this?"

Dunwody, suddenly confused, could only wonder whether his face showed what he really felt. His guest con tinued his investigation.

"An' looky there on the table!" point ing where some servant apparently had placed yet another article of ladies' ap parel, dropped by accident- a dainty glove of make such as no servant of that country ever saw, much less used. "Come now," blithely went on the gentleman from Belmont. "Things is lookin' mighty suspicious, mighty sus for our share in the new territory won picious. Why didn't you tell us when you all was married?"

A sudden start might have drawn at tention to Judge Clayton, but he controlled himself. And if a slight smile assailed his lips at least he was able to suppress it. Nothing, however, could suppress the curiosity of the able student of Roman history. "I'll just take a little prowl around," said he. He was rewarded in his search. A little hairpin isy at the first step of the stair. He fell upon it with uproarious glee. "Trail's gittin' hot," said he. "! reckon I'll go on up."

"No!" cried Dunwody suddenly and sprang to the foot of the stair. "Please -that is" - He hesitated. "If you will kindly wait a moment I will have the servants put your room in order for you before you go up."

"Oho," cried the Hon. William; "don't want us to find out a single thing House o' mystery, ah. ah! Doctor here too! Tell us, anybody died here to day?"

Dr. Jamieson answered by quietly stepping to the side of Dunwody Judge Clayton without comment joined them, and the three edged in between the exhibarated gentleman and the stairway which he sought to ascend

"I was just saying, gentlemen," remarked Judge Clayton quietly. "that was sure it would give us all much pleasure to take a stroll around these beautiful grounds with Colonel Dun wody.

He tooked Dunwody calmly in the eye, and the latter knew he had a friend. He knew perfectly well that Judge Clayton did not for an instant suppose that these articles ever had be longed to any servant.

Ray Condrick Shuts Out Fast Mechanics Art High Nine Last Satur-

In spite of extremely poor weather conditions for playing ball, the game on the Clapp Memorial field, East Weymouth, school and Mechanics Art high of Boston was the best game seen in town this Mechanics Art trotted on to the field, supremely confident of a victory over the Weymouth lads but Ray Condrick, backed up by some of the classiest fielding ever pulled off, sent the Boston boys down to inglorious defeat and to make the dose more effective, administered a decisive shut out to the tune of 2 to 0.

Andwood, the visitors' twrler, pitched good enough baseball to have won with an even break in luck, but a wild pitch and a passed ball in the same inning to-Mrs. Carrie Fahey and Mrs. Anna Wil- gether with a couple of timely hits,

Weymouth high secured their two runs in the fourth inning. Gorman got a life when Lally fell over his slow roller "Toby" Fraher laid down a perfect sacridce and Gorman made second easily. Gloster made a good bid for a hit, but Cutler got his grounder and tossed the Weymouth third baseman out at first. Raymond Condrick decided, that as long as he had cracked out a hit in the crisis at Brockton the week before, the time was ripe for another hit and promptly singled to center, Gorman scoring. Andwood walked Reilly and Vender who ran for Condrick, took second. Andwood uncorked a wild pitch and Vender raced to third. On the next pitch, Dempsey, the M. A. H. S. catcher, let the ball get away from him and Vender scored the second and final run of the game. After this inning Andwood settled down and pitched very well indeed, but the Boston boys were breaking their bats trying to connect with Condrick's curves and Mechanics Art wended their homeward way with a 2 to 0 defeat to think over. The features of the game were the magnificent back-stopping of Fraher and Condrick's pitching for Weymouth, while Selectmen's and Other Town Matters. Lally excelled for Mechanics Art. The

DANIEL J. SAMPSON AT REST

Welknown Nort Weymouth Citizen Passes Away At His Home Last Saturday. Daniel J. Sampson, a resident of North

Weymouth for over forty three years died at his home on Saturday May 10, at 11 P.

Funeral services were held at his late home on Shaw street Tuesday at two olclock.

Rev. Rufus H. Dix of the Universalist Church officiated, assisted by Rev. Melvin S. Nash a former pastor The Pilgrim Quartette sang the following selections. "The Lord is My Shenpard" "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Abide With Me."

The bearers were Miles P. Keene, Hiram Nadell, Joseph Poulin, Frank H. Torry. The body was excerted by the fireman and a delegation from the Delphi Lodge Knights of Pythias to the North Weymouth Cemetery.

A very large gathering of friends testifled to the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him and he was laid at rest in the midst of many beautful

Mr. Sampson was born in Marshfleld July 13, 1844, the son of Aaron and Faith (Baker) Sampson. On June 11, 1871 he married Mary A. Clapp of South Scituate He was a blacksmith by trade and began business in North Weymouth under the firm name of Sampson and Whiting, and continued his work as blacksmith until 1900, when he became a salesman in the Boston Markets for Solomon Ford. He was an honorary member of the local Fire Department, Firemen's Relief Association, Delphi Lodge Knights of Pythias and Universalist Men's Club.

His death came as a shock to his family and friends for although he had been ill for many weeks he was apparently recovering and able to be about among his friends again. Of his immediate family he is survived by his wife, two sons, Edwin R. and A. Wesley Sampson, one North Weymouth and two brothers, tice Aaron W. Sampson of Marshfield and Sidney W. Sampson of Duxbury.

Weymouth Grocers' Association.

Organizations in Weymouth as well as in other towns come and go. Also organizations come and stay and among them is the Weymouth Grocers' Association which observed its 20th anniversary by a gathering at the store of Everett Loud, East Weymouth, last Wednesday evening.

The pleasing preliminary event was a banquet with about fifty grocers and guests at the board. President W. O. Collyer was at the head of the table and when salads and other viands had been discussed, talk for the good of the town and its trade was in order.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were :- W. O. Collyer, president; Walter W. Pratt, vice president; E. W. Hunt, clerk, and J. Otis Bates, treasurer.

Weymouth Choral Society Presents Cantata, "Joan of Arc," Before Large Gathering in Fogg's Opera House, South Weymouth, Last Friday Evening.

The Weymouth Choral Society scored is second success last Friday evening, when the cantata, "Joan of Arc" was presented in Fogg Opera House, South Weymouth, before one of the largest audiences that ever gathered at a musical production in Weymouth.

Rehearsals for the cantata have been carried on weekly ever since the first public appearance of the society in "The Creation" in Bates opera house, last February, and all the chorus singing showed the careful and complete training given under the efficient direction of Mr. J. W. Calderwood, musical director of the society. The soloists of the occasion were Mrs. Annie Estelle Hollis, soprano; James Rattigan, tenor, and Clarence H. Wilson, baritone. Previous to the cantata, an overture was played by the orchestra, and each of the above artists contributed a solo. Each number was highly applauded by the appreciative audience.

In the presentation of the cantata, "Joan of Arc," the solo parts were sung by the following :-

Joan of Arc, Mrs. Annie Estelle Hollis; Philip, a youth of Domremy, James Rattigan; Robert DeBaudricourt, Provost of Vaucouleurs, Clarence H. Wilson; and Jean DeNovelonpont, a gentleman of Metz, Clarence H. Wilson.

Mrs. William A. Hodges presided at the piano during the cantata and also accompanied the soloists in the first half of the evening's program.

The chorus singing was upheld by a gathering of eighty members of the society who made a most pleasing picture grouped so artistically on the spacious

BOARD OF TRADE.

Town Meeting Committee.

As we said last week the meeting of the Board of Trade as held on Thursday evening was one of the largest and most interesting in the history of the organiza-

In addition to routine business the members with invited guests had for discussion a document called "Warrant for the Board of Trade Town Meeting" and there were twelve articles in the Warrant.

which E. W. Hunt, the president, was elected moderator and Article 2 which reads as follows:

"Art. 2. To see if the Board of Trade will recommend that the Town equip our Engine Houses with Motor Fire Apparatus," was taken up and discussed to quite an extent. Capt. R. B. Worster spoke of the apparatus recently installed in the Engine House Ward 3, the efficient work it had done and the willingness of the men to respond to a call from any part of the town. F. H. Torrey spoke of the appreciation of the machine but thought Ward I needed something of the kind nearer home, both for ready efficiency and on account of the inadequate supply of water for fire purposes. Selectman W. J. Dunbar spoke decidedlysie favor of more and better equipment for tire purposes in Ward 2 and Walter W. Pratt, clerk of the Board of Engineers Riley, ss advocated more "Motor Fire Apparatus." Chief J. Q. Hunt responded to a call but Reid, If thought the class of apparatus under discussion was not what was most needed. If anything was to be done it should be something more extensive embracing Weymouth I 0 0 0 1 1 0 0 0-3 all appliances for fire fighting. Binnian and Louis A. Cook of that committee explained much of the work already accomplished in the study of localities, present adaptability of our public parks as play grounds and other features of the work. A. P. Worthen spoke of the difficulty in getting any help from the Metropolitan Park Commission on account of the large amounts of money already spent and legislation necessary in order to raise more money. Henry E. Hanley advocated a more extended use of the grounds owned by the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society as affording one of the best places in the state for the purpose in question. Geo. H. Priesing, Frank N. Blanchard and others spoke on the question and it was further investigation.

As indications were that a small part of the Warrant would be handled M. E. Hawes move that Article 10 be taken up. Art. 10. This article proved to be of especial interest and had many advocates with Col. W. W. Castle, the most enthusiastic speaker of the hour and a proper and glorious observance of our "Nation's Holiday" will undoubtedly be the result: as the Board of Trade voted to appropriate $100 for its treasury and the moderator was Belle of Easter, bm (E. This article had a strong advocate in Arthuf C. Gerstley, its father, but it was up against the same opposition as the "Play Ground" article viz: immense expense, lack of encouragement by the Metropolitan Park Commission and Article 12, to see if the meeting will adjourn passed in the affirmative in time for people to take the late cars.

CHAPTER IX.

The Arbitrament.

T was twilight when the little cavalcade from Tallwoods arrived at the old river town of St. Gene vieve. The peaceful inhabitants. most of them of the old French strain, looked out in amazement at the jaded horses, the hard faced men. By this time the original half dozen riders had received reinforcements at different plantations, so that a band of perhaps thirty armed men had as sembled.

Brief inquiry at St. Genevieve informed them that the little steamer Helen Bell had passed the town front that day soon after noon. As she depended almost as much upon poles and lines for her upstream progress as upon her steam it was thought likely she would tie up for the night at some point not more than ten or twelve miles upstream. Dunwody, made lead er of the party by unanimous consent, therefore determined to ride across the river bed at its shortest distance in the attempt to intercept the steamer, rely. ing upon chance to secure small boats near at hand should they be necessary. His men by this time were glad enough to dismount and take some sort of refreshment.

It was dark when again they mounted, and the old river road, full of washouts, stumps and roots, made going slow after the moon had sunk. They had, however, no great distance to ride. At a point ten miles up the river they came upon a small buddle of fishermen's huts. At one of these Dunwody knocked and the frightened tenant, at first almost speechless at the sight of so many armed men, stammeringly informed him that the steamer had passed late that evening and was, in his belief, tied up at a little towhead island not more than half a mile upstream.

"What boats have you got here?" demanded Dunwody.

"No boat at all, monsieur," rejoined the habitant. "Maybe so four, five feesb boat, that's ball."

"Bring them out!" was the terse order.

They dismounted and, leaving their horses tied in the wood at the roadside, they went to the water's edge and presently embarked, a half dozen men in each of as many long river skiffs of the type used by the fishermen in carrying out their nets. Dunwody and Clayton were in the foremost boat, and each pulled an oar. At length, at Dunwody's quiet signal, all the boats paused, the crews holding fast to the overhanging branches of the trees on the main shore of the river.

"She's out there, just across yonder island," he whispered. "I think I can see her stack now. She must be tied up close. We can slip in on this side, make a landing and get aboard her before she can stop us, if we're careful. Keep perfectly quiet. Follow us, boys. Let no one fire a shot until I order it. Come on, Clayton."

Inside the first fringe of the tan gled and heavy willows the mud lay deep in a long, half drained pool of plunge, wading across, sometimes waist deep. In spite of the noise thus made there was no challenge, and the little body of men, reforming into an irregular line, presently arrived at the outer edge of the willow flat. Here, in the light which hung above the river's surface, they could see the bulk of the steamer looming almost in their faces. She had her landing planks out, and here and there along the narrow sand beach a smoldering ember or so showed where little fires had been made. As a matter of fact, more than half of the men of the boat had preferred to sleep on shore. Their muffled bodies. covered in their blankets, might even now be seen here and there.

"Who goes there?" came a military call from the boat. "Halt, halt!" came from the line of sleepers suddenly awakened. In an instant both parties were under arms

It spoke well for the temper of the men with Dunwody, that none of them made any answer. Silently, like so young northerner. "Stack arms!" many shadows, they dropped down to the ground.

"What was that. Kammerer?" cried a voice on the boat, calling down to some one on the shore.

"There are men here," was the answer. "Somebody's out there."

The night was now astir. Men half clothed, but fully armed, now lined up slong the heach, along the gunwale of the boat. Apparently there were some twenty or more of them in all. "River pirates, likely," said the leader. who had now come down the gangplank. "Fall in, men; fall in!" His voice rang sharp and clear, like that of an officer. "Line up along this beach, and get down low!" he commanded. "Hold your fire! Hold! What do you mean? What are you doing?"

Some one had fired a shot. At once | duce a scant flumination. the thicket was filled with armed men. Some unknown member of the boat party, standing on the deck behind the leader, had fired at a movement seen in the willows twenty yards away. the dead and injured of both sides at Young Desha fell back, shot through the body. His friends at first did not steamer and ranged in a ghastly comknow that any one had been hurt, but mon row along the narrow deck. to lie still under fire ill suited their wild temper. With a common impulse and without order they emptied their guns into the mass of dark figures ranged along the beach. The air was filled with shouts and curses. The attacking party advanced. The narrow beach of sand and mud was covered with a struggling mass of fighting

"Get In, men!" cried Dunwody. "Go on! Take the boat!" He pressed on slowly, Judge Clayton at his side, and they two passed on up the gangplank and into the boat itself. The leader of the boat forces, who had retired again to the steamer deck, faced them here. It was Dunwody himself who reached out, caught him in a fell grip and took away from him his rifle.

"Call your men off!" he cried. "Do you all want to get killed?" "You pirates!" exclaimed the boat leader as soon as he could get his

The northerner was not in the least subdued and remained fearless as be-"That's fine talk!" he said. "Why haven't we a right here? We're on a navigable stream of the United States, in free waters and in a free country, and we're free to do as we propose. We're under a free flag. What do you mean by firing into us?"

"You're not navigating the river at all," retorted Judge Clayton. "You're tied up to Missouri soil. The real channel of the river is away out yonder. and you know it. We're inside our water which stood in the middle of the right in boarding you. We want to willow covered flat. "You're pirates!" reiterated the northand you want to take this boat. You'll are only fools. But what do they say, have to account for this."

"We are ready to account for it," said latter as he finally returned. Dunwody "Throw down your arms or we will kill every man of you-at

Out of the confusion at last there might have been heard the voice of Dunwody, calling again for Jamieson. There was work for the surgeon when last were brought aboard the little "Take care of them, Jamieson," said Dunwody shortly. He himself leaned against the rail.

"You're hurt yourself, Dunwody," exclaimed Jamieson, the blood dripping from his fingers when be balf rose. "What's wrong?"

"Nothing-I got a nick in my leg. I think, but I'm all right. See to the others."

Jamleson bent over the body of young Desha, who had been first to suffer here on the debated ground of Missouri. He had been shot through the upper body and had died with little suffering. Of the assailing party two others also were beyond aid. Of these both were shot through the head, and death did not at once relieve them. They both lay groaning dully. Jamieson passed them swiftly by. The tally showed that of the Missourians three had been killed, four badly wounded, besides the slight wound of Dunwody. Of the boat party, smaller in the first place though well armed, the loss had been slightly less. Two men had been killed outright and three others badly wounded, of these one, probably, fatally hurt. To all of these Jamieson ministered as best he might. The deck was wet with blood. Silent and saddened spectators, the attacking party stood ranged along the rail on the side next to the shore. On the opposite side were the sullen defenders.

Carlisle, the leader of the boat party, stood silent, with lips tightly compressed, not far from where Dunwody leaned against the rail. He made no comment on the scene and was apparently not unused to such spectacles. Occasionally he bent over, the better to observe the results of 'the surgeon's work, but he ventured no comment and indulged in no recriminations.

The night faded after all, at last. Along the level of the water's surface came some glints from the eastern sky. The horizon paled slightly. At last a haggard dawn came to light the

"Captain," began Dunwody at last, turning to the commander of the boat forces. "We will be leaving before long. As to you, you will have to turn back. You will take your boat downstream, if you please.'

"It's not as I please," rejoined the other. "You order us back from our journey at your own peril. I'm an I am therefore under orders. I was river fell during the night-some inches following a prisoner late in my charge in all. She's hard aground on the when I fell in with this party bound shore."

"It was the cause of it, and we intend to take her," answered Dunwody. "We don't intend to use violence unless it is necessary. But as to you, will you take your boat below and out of this country?" "I will not."

"Very well, then, we'll take you from your own boat and we'll make her pay the penalty." "By what right?"

"By the right of the long arm, since you insist."

"You would make us prisonerswithout any process of law whatever."

The Baking Oven is big enough to bake for the the largest family, and every square inch is heated exactly uniform.

The Linings of the Oven are made of white alumaloyd sheets, a new rust-resisting metal which does not scale, but keeps neat and smooth and lasts with the rest of the range. The bottom and side linings of both broiling and baking ovens are a bar-locking, removable type, securely fastened, but very easy to take out.

The Glenwood Patent Oven Heat Indicator is dependable, and what gas range users have long been looking for.

"Glenwood Range" is to-day a household word the country over and the standard for cooking and baking wherever sold.

Matter of Cost?

If you think it is, you are wrong from the start

The expense of telephone service is not figured by what it costs for a whole year, but by how much it saves each time it is used.

Consider This

HOW MANY NICKELS do you leave at the "Pay Station" during the year?

HOW MUCH TIME do you lose making the trip to the Pay Station?

HOW MUCH MONEY do you spend in twelve months for car fare, in shopping or delivering messages that you could send by telephone if you had one?

How much time and nerve force do you so lose?

A few cents a day pays for telephone service and saves all this. Our Contract Dept., Fort Hill 7600 will talk the matter over with you.

Earth's Fairest.

Written for the Gazette and Transcript. "I sometimes think there is no help for it, Jack, I'll have to be a poet."

"Beloved! you astonish me. What have I done to be punished like this?" "Punished!" protested the Bride-

'You couldn't call it a punishment if your wife had beautiful thoughts and expressed them beautifully."

"If that was all there was to it, I shouldn't object in the least," he admitted; but you know perfectly well, Beloved, that poets (and poetesses particularly) are queer, full of any number of oddities their long-suffering friends have to put up with. Why, there is Gil Barton's sister, bothers the family about to death running her typewriter in the middle of In a pitcher's battle last Thursday after- the night. She declares genius burns betnoon, the Weymouth High school nine ter in the wee small hours, and the family in Quincy 3 to 2 in eleven innings. An- What would I do with an unreasonable

What gives you such strange, uncomfortable notions tonight, Beloved?"

> "Only these," the Bride informed him, pointing to a glass bowl full of apple blossoms. "Can't you see that I simply must flud some way of expressing my pleasure in their beauty!"

> "That's easy enough," avowed the practical Benedict. "Just say they are beautiful and let it go at that.'

> "That's too ordinary for apple blossoms It might do for roses or violets or orchids, but not for these."

"You seem to think roses are the more common," objected the Benedict. "Well, aren't they?" was the quick rejoinder. "I can go at any time of year to a florist's and get roses if I have the price; but where, pray tell, can I find apple blossoms outside the first two weeks in May?"

"I hadn't thought of that." "I have thought of it many a time, and it sometimes seems as if I must find some way of preserving them."

by local applications, as they cannot reach the dis eased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed for-ever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the MINSTREL SHOW AND DANCE.

Division 6 A. O. H. Fill Bates Opera House and Score a Success.

The second annual minstrel show and dance of Division 6, A. O. H., and Ladies Auxiliary 2, was held at Bates' opera house last Friday evening and was a big success both socially and financially.

The local hits by the end men caused much merriment. Mrs. Lucy Bagley was director and pianist; and little Mary Haniford in specialties made a hit, as did also little Jimmie Moralles.

The soloists, Miss Murphy of Whitman, soprano, Ralph Flint, baritone, and Miss Polly Daly, assistant, were well re-

The interlocutor was William Shanahan; tambos, Milton Richmond, Danny Delorey, Charles Williamson, William Wall, Harry Richmond, George Hunt, Henry O'Brlen, Bernard Gunville and Raymond Corridan; tamborine girls, Ber-Margaret Kelley, Anna Daly and Alice Williamson; and soubretts, Miss Polly Daly and Mrs. Loretta Hunt.

The soloists were all well received and all were obliged to respond to encores. The large chorus added much to the entertainment. The program was as

GEORGE S. CORLISS FOUND DEAD

Mystery to be Solved as to Incidents Connected With His Last Hours.

The police of Braintree are trying to find out who locked the door of a shed in which George S. Corliss was found dead by his wife at an early hour Sunday morning. He was employed at the Baker's Basin, Quincy and died it is believed from injuries received by falling off a staging ten feet high at the Yacht Basin, Saturday morning.

The Corlisses live at 12 Commercial street, East Braintree, just over the Weymouth line. When the body was discovered by the wife Patrolman John D. Walsh was notified. He in turn notified Dr. James W. Cook and Chief of Police Horace Hunt, who with Officer James R. Qualey were soon at the scene. Medical examiner John C. Fraser was called and Sunday evening held an autopsy. He was ceed to the church where services will be tha Cote, Mary Gagan, Adelaide White, assisted by Drs. James H. Cook and George D. Bullock.

The police had previously learned that Corliss had fallen from the staging at Quincy and rumors of foul play were quieted when the autopsy showed that Corliss had sustained a fracture of the skull and other injuries when he fell from the staging. If the setting hen cannot get a good dust bath when she comes off her nest, trouble will result later sure.

If taken at a very early age, chickens can be taught to come and go at certain times, to feed in a certain way and do other things that will save time and annoyance.

Where green cut bone is fed, about 4 ounces a week fed in small quantities at a time is a good average allowance per hen. It need not be fed every day.

Set out the tomatoes the latter part of May, using good strong plants. Protect from frost and stake up as soon as necessary. Keep suckers trimmed off. Set plants four feet apart in a sunny spot.

It may be a little late to plant some kinds of vegetables if it has been the design to have them on the table and cooked at a given day, but it is not late for general planting for the kitchen garden. In fact, nothing has been lost by waiting.

Some growers protect their fruit by tying paper bags nver the clusters when the grapes are as large as peas. The mouth of the bag is secured about the stem of the cluster with soft wire. Insects and fungus cannot affect the fruit when thus protected.

All eggs from stolen nests, whose freshness is doubtful, and all incubator eggs should either be thrown away, boiled for the little chicks or used at home. They should never be sent to market. WEYMOUTH, MASS. Rotten eggs need not be discussed. Any person who will send one to market deserves all the penalty possible from the pure food law.

> Good seed corn is the key to getting good stands of corn. A good stand of corn is necessary to secure good yields. Owing to the wet fall of 1911 there is now much doubtful seed corn in this country. One cannot afford to plant corn any year, much less this year, without testing.

The feeding value, as well as the market value, and palatability of hay is lowered by being sunburned. The feeding value is probably hurt most by the loss of leaves. Sunburned clover and alfalfa lose a large part of the leaves in handling, and this is the best part of the crop. When the sun is shining very brightly the alfalfa or grass should not be left in the swath long. A large part of the curing ahould be done in the windrow and the cock Most of the hay is then shaded, and so the damaging effect of intense sunthine is reduced to the exposed portion. And a stock cover will still further lessen the injury from the sun as well as from rain.

The proper keeping of farming tools and equipment is almost as important as having them. A wagon, a mowing machine and all other good farm implements will last for many years with constant use and give large value for their cost if they are properly cared for when not in use and are kept in good paint and repair. On the average farm enough is lost in tools and implements every year to pay interest on enough money to purchase 4 times the equipment the farm needs. The annual less in this respect is far more than the farmer can afford to bear. There is no reasonable need for the loss. Sheltering machinery amounts to the same thing as placing money in the bank, or legitimate saving in other ways.

How Bad Backs Have Been Made Strong-Kidney Ills Corrected.

All over Weymouth you hear it. Doan's Kidney Pills are keeping up the good work. Weymouth people are telling about it-telling of bad backs made sound again You can believe the testimony of your own townspeople. They tell it for the benefit of you who are suffering. If your back aches, if you feel lame, sore and miserable, if the kidneys act too frequently, or passages are painful, scanty and off color, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has helped so many of your friends and neighbors. Follow this Weymouth citizens advice and give Doan's a chance to do the same for you

Benjamin W. Hewett, 191 Washington street, Weymouth, Mass., says: "I had kidney trouble so bad I couldn't stfaighten. My back ached and the kidney secretions were too frequent in passage. When I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, I used them After I had taken two boxes, all the ailments left me. I have had no sign of kidney trouble since."

The Sham and the Real.

Every good thing has its host of imitaters; every genuine article its counterfeits. Bad manners and wicked habits have theirs also; but he who shams the bad never boasts of it; while they who ape the virtues of the good or simulate the genuine never hesitate to place the counterfeit before the public in their most alluring tones. When these people imitate they always choose a pronounced type or popular subject to copy from, and when they claim to be as good as "So and So," or sell an article equal to "So and So," the public may depend uron it that Mr. "So and So" and his article are always the best of the kind. Thus the sham is always proving the genuine merit of the thing it copies. A firm of enterprising gentlemen produce and popularize an article of household use such as the Royal Baking P wder, whose convenience, usefulness and real merit, make for itself an immense and universal sale. A hundred imitators arise on every hand, and as they hold out their sham articles to the public, yelp in chorus. "Buy this, it's just as good as Royal, and much cheaper!" The Royal Baking Powder is the standard the world over and the imitators in their cry that theirs is 'just as good as Royal' are a the time emphasizing this fact. In their laborious attempts to show by analysis said otherwise, that the "Snowball" brand hat the "Resurrection powder is "as dolesome as Royal" or that the "Earthquake" brand is "as pure as the Roval," as well as by their contortive twistings of chemical certificates and labored efforts to obtain recognition from the government chemists and prominent scientists who have certified the superiority of Royal over all others, they all admit the "Royal" to be the acme of perfection which is their highest ambition to imitate. But the difference between the real and these imitations' which copy only in general appearance, is as wide as that between the paste and the true diamond. The shams all pay homage to the "Royal."-New Castle, Pa. Democrat.

It's Dangerous, Being a Songster. "I notice," said Mrs. Pozozzle, "that a choir soloist in Greenwich, Conn., broke an artery while singing a high good location, price note. I never heard of an accident such as that before, but I have often feared Mr. Pozozzle might rupture himself singing the low notes in 'Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep.'

Inculcating Right Views.

Some people hold that children should hear sad things to cultivate their sympathy. Might it not be just as effective to teach them to sympathize with gladness? Is it not much easier to weep with those that weep than it is to really rejoice with those who do rejoice? It is a very hardened heart that is not softened at the sight of pain and distress, while it requires something higher and nobler to be glad when another has some pleasure or happiness greater than we possess.

STYLES IN HANDCUFFS.

The Old Time "Twisters" Were Instruments of Torture.

It is in the Aeneid that we find the first reference to the bandcuff. Vergil informs us that Proteus was, by means of such a device, fettered and rendered belpless by Aristaeus.

It is of record that about 400 years before the Christian era an army of victorious Greeks came upon several chariots of Carthaginians which. among other things, contained a large number of handcuffs.

Our term "handcuff" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "handcop." In the Saxon days these handcops were used in the case of nobles, while "footcops" were reserved for kings. The terms employed in the fourteenth century were "shack bolt" and "swivel manacle," and the specimens thereof which have come down to us show that the instruments were as cumbersome as their

One, the flexible, was very similar to that now in use, and the other, which was called "the figure eight," was utilized to restrain violent prisoners. This "figure eight" was greatly dreaded, since severe pain was occasioned the fettered person did he attempt to move a limb.

There used to be a form of handcuft, now happily abolished, called the "twister." This consisted of a chain with handles at each end. This chain with the wrists: the handles at each end. This chain with the weight and the control of the weight and the weight and the control of the weight and the weight and the control of the weight and the weight was placed about the wrists; the handles were brought together and twisted until a firm grip was obtained. The least struggle on the part of the unfortunate captive resulted in the greatcuff was that called by the French "la attend these services.

In some parts of Europe there is still used an exceedingly primitive form of handcuff. It consists of a V-shaped piece of metal, wherein the wrists are inserted, the open ends being drawn together by means of a cross hook, which, however, must be maintained taut during the whole time the captive

The most ingenius and effective of all handcuffs is that used in the United States and, indeed, adopted by the police of most civilized countries. It is much lighter and much less clumsy than the old flexible handcuff and is not painful to the wearer.-Harper's Weekly.

An Interested Listener, Mark Twain one rainy day found himself in a room in his club which contained only one other occupant. The two men drifted into conversation. Mark began a discussion on the merits of "Tess of the d'Urbervilles," and made brilliant deductions as to the character and personality of the writer of "Tess," from what he called the internal evidence of the story. His listener at times mildly dissented, but on the whole maintained an attitude of impassivity.

When "Tess" had been labeled only passable, Mark Twain's chance acquaintance excused himself and departed. Calling the smoke room attendant Mark Twain asked him whom he had been conversing with.

"That's Mr. Thomas Hardy, sirl" replied the steward impressively.

FRIDAY, MAY 23, 1913.

The Gazette & Transcript is printed and mailed Friday afternoons, and is for sale at all News-stands in the Weymouths and at the South Terminal, Boston.

All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, and unpub lished communications cannot be returned by mail unless stamps are enclosed

Notices of all local entertainments to which admission fee is charged must be paid for at regular rates, 10 cents per line in the reading matter, or regular ates in the advertising columns.

To many people a day for the suspension of business and labor is a day for festive occasion and amusement and such is the case with Memorial Day but to others we are still too near the trying times of 61 to 65 to forget those who gave up their life in the great struggle for the Nation's maintenance and next Friday we join in a proper observance of the day and pay our tribute to the dead. The Gazette & Transcript will consequently be issned on Thursday of next week and we ask correspondents and advertisers to give us copy as early as possible in the week.

CHAPTER X.

The Lady at Tallwoods,

HE arrival of the four visitors at Tallwoods and their departure so soon thereafter were events, of course, not unknown to Josephine, but only conjecture could exist in her mind as to the real nature of the errand in either case. Jeanne, her maid, speculated as to this openly.

"That docteur also, he is now gone," said she ruefully; "but, yet, behold the better opportunity for us to escape, madame. Ah, were it not for the injury of madame I should say let us at once set out. We could follow the

"But they will return!" exclaimed her mistress. "We cannot tell how long they will be gone. And, Jeanne, I suffer."

"Ah, my poor angel! You suffer! It is criminal! We dare not start. Content yourself to be weak and helpless for a time. Not even that brute, that prisoners, Carlisle and Kammerer. assassin, that criminal, dare offend you now, madame. But of course he is impossible for one like madame. Yet I have delight to hear even a brute, an assassin, make such love-ab, such love!"

It was evening of the second day, and the shadows again were lying long across the valley when there came slowly filing into view along the turn of the road the band of returning riders. At their head was the tall form of Dunwody, the others following, straggling, drooping in their sad-

"There has been combat, madame!" whispered Jeanne. "See! He has been hurt. Look-those others!"

Dunwody got out of his saddle with difficulty. He limped as he walked now. A slender man near him got down unaided, a tall German looking man followed suit. The group broke apart and showed a girl riding, bound. Some one undid the bonds and helped her to the ground.

All of these things were apparent from the vantage ground of the up per story window, but Josephine, unwilling to play at spying, saw none of it. At last, however, an exclamation from Jeanne caused her to hasten to the window. "Madame, madame, look -it is that officer-it is monsieur le capitaine Carlisle! Look, why then"-

With no more than a glance her mistress turned, flung open the door of the room, hurried down the stairs, passed out of the hall and so fronted these newcomers at the gallery. They stood silent as they saw her She herself was first to speak.

"What are you doing with that woman?" she demanded. They all stood in silence at this apwhere none had known of any woman has come to see these parts of our away, busy with cases as bad as this. country. Madam." he added. "this is into view-"I think you already know."

"Madam, what are you doing here?" asked Carlisle. "But you're hurt! head of the stairs, How is that? Have you also been attacked by these ruffians? I did not dream Dunwody was actually so much armed with weapons carelessly left in a ruffian."

"Madam," said Dunwody, slowly turning to her, "I can't exchange words now. There has been an enrounter, as I said. There have been Den killed, and some of us have been made their first attack on southern soil. This gentleman is an army officer. I'm a United States marshal, and as a prisoner he's safe in talking. He has come here on his own moral initiative, in the interest of what you call freedom. You two should be friends once more. But would you mind helping me make these people comfortable as we can?"

"You are hurt yourself!" she said. turning toward him, seeing him wince as he started up the step.

"No," he said curtly, "it's nothing." "That girl yonder-ah! she has been whipped! My God in heaven! What is to be next, in this wilderness? Is there indeed here no law, no justice?"

The deep voice of the German, Kammerer, broke in. "Thank God in heaven, at least you are a woman!" he said, turning to her.

"A woman! Why thank God for that? Here at least a woman's sole privilege is insult and abuse."

The others heard, but did not all understand her taunt. Tears sprung to the eyes of young Carlisle. "Don't talk so!" was all he could exclaim, feeling himself not wholly innocent of reproach. Dunwody's face flushed a deep red.

"Madam." said he in a low voice.

umping toward Josephine, "you and must declare some sort of truce. The world has all gone helter skelter. What'll become of us I don't know, but we need a woman here now."

She gazed at him steadily, but made no reply. Growling, he turned away and timped up the steps, beckoning the others to follow into the hall. In the door between the hall and the farther room there my a mounted rug of a bear skin. He tripped at its edge and fell, catching vainly at the door. A sharp exclamation escaped him. He did not at once rise. It was the arm of his prisoner, Carlisle, who aided him. "You are hurt, sir."

"No, no, go away!" exclaimed Dunwody, as he struggled to his feet. "One bone's gone," he said presently in a low tone to Clayton. "I broke it when I fell that time."

The men, captors and captives, looked blankly at one another. It was the mind of a woman which first rose to this occasion. In an instant Josephine, with a sudden exclamation, flung aside

"Jeanne! Sally," she called. "Show these gentlemen to their rooms," naming Clayton and Jones. "Sir," she said to Dunwody, whose injury she did not guess to be so severe, "you must lie down. Gentlemen, pass into the other room there, if you please." She motioned to the two prisoners and stepped to Dunwody's side,

"I can't have this," he broke out suddenly. "You're hurt yourself. Go to your room. I tell you, it's nothing." "Be quiet," she said, close at his ear.

"I'm not afraid of you now." In this strange house party a truce was tacitly agreed. Dunwody's injury left Clayton practically leader of the Missourians. His party gravitated toward him, while opposite sat the two

What she saw now was this: Carlisle and Kammerer, themselves now the lower hall, had passed unnoticed from the dining room and now were tiptoeing down the hall toward the door of Dunwody's apartment. Clayton and his men, dulled with loss of sleep, had allowed them to leave the hurt. The northern abolitionists have main room and these two, soldiers by training, had resolved to turn the tables and take possession of the place. Their plans were at the point of success. They had almost reached the door of Dunwody's room, weapons in hand, when from above they heard a sharp command.

"Halt, there!" a woman cried to

They turned and looked up, arrested by the unmistakable quality in the tones. They saw her leaning against the baluster of the stair, one arm bound tightly to her side, the other resting a revolver barrel along the baluster and glancing down it with a fearless eye. She took a step or two lower down the stair, sliding the weapon with her. "What are you doing there?" she demanded. A half humorous twist came to the mouth of Carlisle. He answered quietly, as he raised a hand for silence: "Just about what you might expect us to do. We're trying to take care of ourselves. But how about yourself? I thought you were with us, madam.

I had heard that you"-"Come." she answered, lowering the weapon and stepping swiftly down the stairs. "Come outside, where we can

The three now passed out the open front door to the wide gallery, which lay in the dim twilight untenanted.

"How came you here?" she demanded, "You left me. I don't know anything about what's going on. I'm all af sen."

"So are we all, madam. But I'll tell you all I know. I left you for several reasons. I knew my main errand with you was done. My post is out beyond. up the Missouri. I was on my way there when I got orders to take you with me, as you know. I concluded to drop off and send a telegraphic report to Washington and to ask consent to go on out to my post. I saw your note to Dunwody. You had then chosen a new Jailer. I thought since he was better known in this country than myself your reputation would be safer in his hands than mine. But as soon as I left I began to think it over, and I re- road. solved to follow after you not as a faller, but as a friend. I met a little party of northern men going out to the Kansas country, and I knew Lieutenunt Kammerer here at St. Louis. We all thought alike. That girl yonder pleaded so hard that we took her on with us at Cairo. She was bound to get away. When we tied up for the night above St. Genevieve we were attacked by these Missourians here. I had intended to leave the boat, for now I knew where you were. Lily fold me you were taken-handled rudely-like a slave-that you- Well, then, I knew it was Dunwody."

"Are you of the revolutionists, madam?" demanded the big German sud-

"Yes." She wheeled upon him. "I am from Europe. I am for liberty." "Come, then," said Kammerer, quietrevolver from her hand. "We're friends. How came you to be in this country here?" She smiled at him bitterly. "Because of my zeal. There were powers who wanted me out of Washington. Ask Captain Carlisle as to that. But this man I met later on the boat, as you know. He-brought me here-as you

"We'll call him to account," interrupted Carlisle. "Why did you stop us? We'd have killed him the next minute. I'll kill him yet."

"I was afraid you would kill him," she said simply. "Well, why not? What has he done to us-our men-to you?" "I could not see it done."

"You'll see worse done. We'll do it yet. You must not stand in our way." His hand closed over his own revolver butt, and he made a half motion for-

"No," she said, and stepped before

Carlisle would have put her aside. "What do you mean? They'll be out here in a minute; we'll have to fight if they catch us here. Do you want to see us killed? Quick! Out of the way!" His voice, raucous in anger, rasped at her ears, low as it was pitched.

"No," she still replied. "Let me do the thinking. Keep quiet! I'll get you out. There's been blood enough shed now."

"You are magnificent, madam," said Cartisle, "but you are visionary. Get out of our way. I claim him. Leave him to me."

"No, I claim him myself. Leave him to me!"

"What next?" exclaimed the young northerner bitterly. "Are we all mad? Haven't you had trouble enough already with this man? You don't make yourself clear. What do you want of

"I'm not entirely clear about it my self. I can't get away from here, but I'm safe here now. But you don't belong here. Very well. I'm obliged to just going to parole you two. You're free to go if you like."

"The lady bass right," said Kammerer. "What she said iss wise, if it

"But, madam, what will become of you?" said Carlisle at last. Her answer was instant. She turned back to the door.

and clear. "Mr. Yates! All of you, come here!"

The inner doors opened and they ran out at her call. Some of them had been asleep, leaning back in their chairs against the wall. The confusion of their approach now aroused all the house. There appeared also the tall form of Dunwody himself, leaning on a rifle barrel for a crutch. All these paused in the hall or on the gallery close to the great door.

"There's been plotting here!" he cried. "What's up? Get your arms, men! Cover them, quick!"

"Wait!" said Carlisle quietly. "We're armed and we've got you covered." His weapon and that of Kammerer shone gray in the half light. Dunwody threw himself against the doorpost with a growl of anger. "You've been plotting against us!"

he said to Josephine grimly. "Well!" "You are unjust, as usual, sir," said Carlisle hotly. "On the contrary, she just kept us from killing you." "What do you mean?" demanded Dunwody dully.

"I've assumed command here," interrupted Josephine calmly. "I've paroled these gentlemen. I'm going to set them free. Judge Clayton and Mr. Jones and you others, too, must go on home. You will have to surrender to the courts. These men are going to leave the state. All of you must disperse-at once."

"And you yourself"- began Dunwody grimly: "what do you plan?" "I remain. I am a hostage. It will now be known where I am. You will be responsible for me now, I fancy that will suit Washington as well as to detain Captain Carlisle as my jailer any longer. If I thought I needed him, I would not let him go. We are all of us going to be under parole, don't you see?"

"Is it your wish that we should give parole in these circumstances, Dunwody?" Judge Clayton himself smiled rather sardonically.

"I don't see why not, after all," said Dunwody, at length, slowly. "I don't see why that isn't about as wise as anything we can do. The law will do the rest of this work and we must all be ready for it, as she says. Only one thing, gentlemen, before we part. As to this young lady here, I'll kill the first man, friend or foe, who raises a breath against her."

An hour later clattering hoofs once more resounded along the Tallwoods

"What are you thinking about, Beloved?" he wanted to know.

The Bride started. "Why do you ask?" she replied in true Yankee fashion.

"B cause you haven't been saying a word for ages, and a few minutes ago you blushed. I was a little curious, that's "You are a mind reader, I do believe," she laughed. "I meant to keep this a secret from you, because I was ashamed NATIONAL to tell. I'm not surprised that I blushed.' "It must be very, very dreadful," mocked the Benedict. "I'm more than ever ardent to know."

"It all started with a letter from Milly," began the Bride. "You know she has been in New York all winter 'cutting her own feed' as she calls it. She has really been very successful."

"What's her line?" inquired the Benedict who sometimes forgot the important items the Bride told him.

"She takes charge of arrangements for teas and little social affairs, and she is very much in demand. Her letter was full of the enthusiasm of it and it set me all agog to be in the atmosphere of enterprise. For a whole day I thought I wan-

"Oh, the ingratitude of it! It just came over me that my punishment for such a wish might well be the fulfilment of it.

"Here I am in a snug little home of my own, surrounded by books and pictures that I love; outside are grass and birds and flowers, a garden and a porch; and I have the meanness to wish for a stuffy back parlor in some dingy house in New York where I wouldn't have more than one tree in sight and no birds but the quarrelsome English sparrows."

"In other words," interpreted the Benedict, "with your bread buttered and jammed, you are crying for a stale old

"Just, so," she assented, "and it would serve me right to have it thrust upon me. "Perhaps it's not so serious as you imagine," the Benedict consoled her. Everybody, I suppose, has seasons of wishing to change places with some one Clerk else. There's a great deal of truth in what I read once, that when people wish to change places with some one else, they have in mind only the pleasant things in that other's lot; and then they plan, besides, to retain the best elements in their own environment. FOURTH OF JULY.

TRANSCRIPT

Advances Made for an All Weymouth Celebration of Independence Day.

We are a week nearer the "Giorious Fourth," the "Day we Celebrate" as that of the "Nation's Birth," than we were at our last issue and while some progress has been made toward a real safe, sane and well ordered town celebration of the day, much is yet to be done.

The committe appointed by the Board of Trade had organized and issued a call for a mass meeting at the Town Hall last Saturday night.

eventually, there was a good number present from all parts of the town and many of the organizations invited well represented. Previous to the meeting proper, there was a short entertainment with Edison disc vocal selections and brief vaudeville, at the conclusion of which, Wm. Shipp, Jr., chairman of the committee, opened the meeting with an outline statement of what was desired and what he would suggest as leading features of the day. Mr. Shipp was listened to with interest as he is an encouragement.

A. P. Worthern, Esq., "broke the ic-," country to the rising generation.

The chairman called for remarks from day afternoon. the several organization represented and ready and encouraging words came from many clubs and societies. As a whole the meeting may be set down as a indication that it is among the possibilities and Celebration."

Quincy Physician Captures Burglar.

City Physician John H. Ash of Quincy who is also court physician of Court Monatiquot 150, Foresters of America, of this town, captured a burglar who had broken into a bakery on Copeland street, Quincy at 2 a. m. Sunday.

The doctor lives opposite the bakery and was awakened by a crash of glass. He looked out in time to see a man's legs disappearing through the bakery window. He ran across the street and shouting a warning to the man that he would shoot if he came out, stood guard until the police came and arrested the culprit who proved to be an old offender.

Noticed Improvement.

A commercial traveler on arriving at a wayside station between Sligo and Enniskillen, remarked to the chief official: "I observe your service has improved latterly." "Can't see it," replied the stationmaster stoically. "Oh, I can," said the "commercial," "your trains are able to whistle without stopping now."

Daily Thought. I am more and more impressed with the duty of finding happiness.-George

Horace Greeley once said, "The way to resume is to resume." In this H G was right. He usually was. The way to do anything is to do that thing. For example:

THE WAY TO BOOM IS TO BOOM

This does not mean running around in circles and yelling your head off. The only thing boomed by that method is the dippy house. The way to boom a town is by intelligent and united effort.

Organize a board of trade, a commercial club or some similar body whose chief business it shall be to make the little town grow.

Use printer's ink and Uncle Sam's postoffice. TALK for the town, WRITE letters for the town, get the local papers to ROOT for the town. Write to individuals and firms seeking a new location. Tell them what Publicity Means Progress.

Let the world know this town is on the map.

SECOND ANNUAL CONCERT.

High School Pupils Entertain Large Tuner and Repairer of Gathering in School Hall Last Friday Evening.

In spite of most unfavorable weather conditions last Friday evening, a good sized audience gathered in the high school hall, East Weymouth, to enjoy the second annual concert given by the high school, assisted by Miss Ruth Stickney, violinist and Martin M. Kelley, tenor.

The school orchestra added much to the success of the affair and the school has ample reason to be extremely proud of its musicians.

Miss Stickney's beautiful violin playing is wellknown to Weymouth audiences and this artist was given a round of applause before and after each of her selections. A Tribute to Our Dead Heroes.

This beautiful land is welcoming spring: With life, the vales and hillsides throb, Memory gently lifts the veil Which has fallen dimly o'er the past, If allowed to accumulate in masses And our soldiers and sailors meet again To honor their comrades of the past.

And felt they stood on sacred ground Shows sweet, peaceful slumbergoenesti each mound.

'Their deeds and sacrifices have been recorded On the pages of their country's history": Martyrs of land and sea were they, Their names enrolled in 'The Book of

Mystery.' They have sculptured marble to tell the names

Of good thoughts ending in heroic deeds In grim war's strife and din. Only these tell of a parent's woe Too deep for words to measure, Few can dream of the hidden grief, Or the sad hearts filled with woe. Many, perhaps, in childhood days, Dreamt o'er life and made their plans Of poble deeds and acts to be Accomplished by the future man.

In general, any good farm soil is all But at the call to arms, they buried their dreams And fought for us on land and see, There lives poured out in crimson streams, Safe, sheltered forever, thou sleepest,

Our soldiers and sailors so true and brave,

We know you have passed to that land ever dear, The flag of your country now floats o'er your graves.

HoldingUp a Train

Mode of Operation Described + by an Expert

By O. HENRY Copyright, 1911, by Doubleday, Page

Note.-The man who told me these things was for several years an outlaw in the southwest and a follower of the pursuit he so frankly describes. His description of the modus operandi should prove interesting, his counsel of value to the potential passenger in some future holdup, while his estimate of the pleasures of train robbing Il hardly induce any one to adopt it as profession. I give the story in almost exactly his own words.

O. H.

Most people would say, if their opinion was asked for, that holding up a train would be a hard job. Well, it isn't; it's easy. I have contributed some to the uneasiness of railroads and the insomnia of express companies, and the most trouble I ever had about a holdup was in being swindled by unscrupulous people while spending the money I got. The danger wasn't anything to speak of, and we didn't mind the trouble.

One man has come pretty near robbing a train by himself, two have succeeded a few times, three can do it if they are hustlers, but five is about the right number. The time to do it and the place depend upon several things.

The first "stickup" I was ever in happened in 1890. Maybe the way Igot into it will explain how most train robbers start in the business. Five out of six western outlaws are just cowboys out of a job and gone wrong. The sixth is a tough from the east who dresses up like a bad man and plays some low down trick that gives the boys a bad name. Wire fences and "nesters" made five of them; a bad heart made the sixth.

Jim S. and I were working on the 101 ranch in Colorado. The nesters had the cowman on the go. They had taken up the land and elected officers who were hard to get along with. Jim and I rode into La Junta one day, going south from a roundup. We were having a little fun without malice toward anybody when a farmer administration cut in and tried to harvest us. Jim shot a deputy marshal, and I kind of corroborated his side of the argument. We skirmished up and down the main street, the boomers having bad luck all the time. After awhile we leaned forward and shoved for the ranch down on the Ceriso.

Well, there wasn't anything we could we decided to transact a little business with the railroads. Jim and I joined forces with Tom and Ike Moore, two brothers who had plenty of sand they were willing to convert into dust.

We selected a place on the Santa Fe where there was a bridge across a deep creek surrounded by heavy timber. All passenger trains took water at the tank close to one end of the bridge. It was a quiet place, the nearest house being five miles away.

The Santa Fe filer was due at the tank at 11:15 p. m. At 11 Tom and I lay down on one side of the track, and Jim and Ike took the other. As the train rolled up, the headlight flashing far down the track and the steam hissing from the engine, I turned weak.

The engine had hardly stopped wher I tumped on the running board on one side, while Jim mounted the other. As soon as the engineer and firemen saw our guns they threw up their hands without being told and begged us not to shoot, saying they would do anything we wanted them to. "Hit the ground!" I ordered, and they both jumped off. We drove them before us down the side of the train. While this was happening Tom and Ike had been blazing away, one on each' side of the train, yelling like Apaches so as to keep the passengers herded in the cars.

By this time all my nervousness was gone. I felt a kind of pleasant excitement as if I were at a dance or a frolic of some sort. The lights were all out in the coaches, and as Tom and Ike gradually quit firing and yelling it got to be almost as still as a graveyard.

I made the fireman get a lantern, and then I went to the express car and yelled to the messenger to open up or get perforated. He slid the door back and stood in it with his hands up. "Jump overboard, son," I said, and he hit the dirt like a lump of lead. There were two safes in the car-a big one and a little one. By the way, I first located the messenger's arsenal-a double barreled shotgun with buckshot cartridges and a 38 caliber in a drawer. I drew the cartridges from the shotgun, pocketed the pistol and called the messenger inside. I shoved my gun against his nose and put him to work. He couldn't open the big safe, but he did the little one. There was only $900 in it. That was mighty small winnings for our trouble, so we decided to go through the passengers.

There were very few people in the day coaches at that time of night, so we made a slim haul until we got to the sleeper. I saw Jim coming in the other door, and I hollered for everybody to climb out and line up.

They commenced to scramble down, and for awhile we had a three ringed

We got them all lined up and pretty quiet, and I went through the bunch. I found very little on them-I mean in the way of valuables.

Then Jim held them steady while I searched the berths. I grappled around in those beds and filled a pillowcase with the strangest assortment of stuff you ever saw. When I finished I dumped the pillowcase load in the middle of the aisle. There were a good many watches, bracelets, rings and pocketbooks, with a sprinkling of false teeth, whisky flasks, face powder boxes, chocolate caramels and heads of hair of various colors and lengths. There were also about a dozen ladies' stockings into which jewelry, watches and rolls of bills had been stuffed and then wadded up tight and stuck under the mattresses.

One of the women-and a good looker she was-wrapped in a striped blanket, saw me pick up one of the stockings that was pretty chunky and heavy about the toe, and she snapped

"That's mine, sir. You're not in the business of robbing women, are you?" Now, as this was our first holdup, we hadn't agreed upon any code of ethics, so I hardly knew what to answer. But, anyway, I replied: "Well, not as a specialty. If this contains your personal property you can have it back." "It just does," she declared eagerly and reached out her hand for it.

"You'll excuse my taking a look at the contents," I said, holding the stocking up by the toe. Out dumped a big get there, and, being mighty hard up, gent's gold watch worth $200, a gent's leather pocketbook that we afterward found to contain $600, a 32 caliber revolver, and the only thing of the lot that could have been a lady's personal property was a silver bracelet worth about 50 cents.

I said, "Madam, here's your property," and handed her the bracelet. "Now," I went on, "how can you expect us to act square with you when you try to deceive us in this manner? I'm surprised at such conduct."

The young woman flushed up as if she had been caught doing something dishonest.

When we finished our job we ordered everybody back to bed, told 'em good night very politely at the door and left. We rode forty miles before daylight and then divided the stuff. Each of us got $1.752.85 in money. We lumped the jewelry around. Then we scattered, each man for himself.

That was my first train robbery, and it was about as easily done as any of the ones that followed. But that was the last and only time I ever went through the passengers.

The best haul I made was just seven years after the first one. We found out about a train that was going to bring out a lot of money to pay off the soldiers at a government post. We stuck that train up in broad daylight Five of us lay in the sand hills near a little station. Ten soldiers were guard ing the money on the train, but they might just as well have been at home on a furlough. We didn't even allow them to stick their heads out the windows to see the fun. We had no trouble at all in getting the money, which was all in gold. Of course a big how was raised at the time about the rob bery. It was government stuff, and the government got sarcastic and wanted to know what the convoy of soldiers went along for. The only excuse given was that nobody was expecting an attack among those bare sand hills in daytime. I don't know what the government thought about the excuse, but I know that it was a good one. The surprise-that is the keynote of the train robbing business The papers published all kinds of sto ries about the loss, finally agreeing that it was between $9,000 and $10,-The government sawed wood. Here are the correct figures, printed for the first time-$48,000. By that time we were expert enough to know what to do. We rode due west twenty miles, making a trail that a Broadway policeman could have followed, and then we doubled back, hiding our tracks. On the second night after the holdup, while posses were scouring the country in every direction. Jim and I were eating supper in the second story of a friend's house in the town where the alarm started from.

I have been asked what we do with the money we get. Well, I never could robber, bless 'em, that they just wrap account for a tenth part of it after it very few, but a man on the dodge has got to have "side kickers." With angry posses and reward hungry officers cutting out a hot trail for him, he must have a few places scattered about the country where he can stop and feed himself and his horse and get a few hours' sleep without having to keep both eyes open.

Now I propose to tell why it is easy to hold up a train and then why no one should ever do it.

In the first place the attacking party has all the advantage. That is, of course, supposing that they are old timers, with the necessary experience and courage. They have the outside and are protected by the darkness. while the others are in the light, hemmed into a small space and exposed. the moment they show a head at a window or door, to the aim of a man who is a dead shot and who won't hesitate to shoot.

But, in my opinion, the main condition that makes train robbing easy is the element of surprise in connection with the imagination of the passengers. The passenger thinks there are a hundred men yelling and shooting outside when maybe there are only two or

As to the train crew, we never had any more trouble with them than if they had been so many sheep. I don't mean that they are cowards. I mean that they have got sense. They know they're not up against a bluff. It's the same way with the officers. I've seen secret service men, marshals and railroad detectives fork over their change as meek as Moses. I saw one of the bravest marshals I ever knew hide his gun under his seat and dig up along with the rest while I was taking toll. He wasn't afraid. He simply knew that we had the drop on the whole outfit.

I will give one instance to support my statement that the surprise is the best card in playing for a holdup.

Along in '92 the Daltons were cutting out a hot trail for the officers down in the Cherokee Nation. Those were their lucky days, and they got so reckless and sandy that they used to announce beforehand what job they were going to undertake. Once they gave it out that they were going to hold up the M., K. and T. flier on a certain night at the station of Pryor Creek, in Indian Territory.

That night the railroad company got fifteen deputy marshals in Muscogee and put them on the train. Beside them they had fifty armed men hid in the depot at Pryor Creek.

When the Katy flier pulled in not a Dalton showed up. The next station was Adair, six miles away. When the train reached there and the deputies were having a good time, explaining what they would have done to the Dalton gang if they had turned up, all at once it sounded like an army firing outside. The conductor and brakeman came running into the car velling "Train robbers!"

Some of those deputies lit out of the door, hit the ground and kept on running. Some of them hid their Winchesters under the seats. Two of them made a fight, and both were killed.

It took the Daltons just ten minutes to capture the train and whip the essort. In twenty minutes more they had robbed the express car of $27,000 and made a clean getaway.

My opinion is that those deputies would have put up a stiff fight at Pryor Creek, where they were expecting trouble, but they were taken by surprise and "locoed" at Adair, just as the Daltons, who knew their business, expected they would. I don't think I ought to close without giving some deductions from my experience of eight years "on the dodge." It doesn't pay to rob trains. Leaving out the question of right and morals, which I don't think I ought to tackle, there is very little to envy in the life of an outlaw. After awhile money ceases to have any value in his eyes. Most of the time he is on the jump, riding day and night, and he lives so hard between times that he doesn't enjoy the taste of high life when he gets it. He knows that his time is bound to come to lose his life or liberty and that the accuracy of his aim, the speed of his horse and the fidelity of his "sider" are all that post pones the inevitable.

It isn't that he loses any sleep over danger from officers of the law. In all my experience I never knew officers to attack a band of outlaws unless they outnumbered them at least three to

But the outlaw carries one thought constantly in his mind, and that is what makes him so sore against lifehe knows where the marshals get their recruits of deputies. He knows that the majority of these upholders of the law were once lawbreakers, horse thieves, rustlers, highwaymen and outlaws like himself and that they gained their positions and immunity by turning state's evidence, by turning traitor and delivering up their comrades to imprisonment and death. He knows that some day-unless he is first shot-his Judas will set to work, the trap will be laid and he will be the surprised instead of a surpriser at a

That is why the man who holds up trains picks his company with a thousand times the care with which a careful girl chooses a sweetheart. That is why he raises himself from his blanket of nights and listens to the tread of every horse's hoofs on the distant road. That is why he broods suspiciously for days upon a jesting remark or an unusual movement of a tried comrade or the broken mutterings of his closest friend, sleeping by his side.

And it is one of the reasons why the was spent. It goes fast and freely. An train robbing profession is not so pleasfidgety looking. They always show friends. A highly respected citizen branches, politics or cornering the mar-

Boston daily papers have taken up the hoodlum question and discussing ways and means of suppressing the evil. Well -not only Boston but every city, town and hamlet has its hoodlum element and the conundrum is what are we going to do about it. First let us ask where does it begin and why does it go on? Primarily the home is its birthplace. If parents use in their presence vulgar and profane language the natural sequesce is the children take it up, if parents have no regard for law and order or respect for those in authority the children can not be expected to rise above the same level. Again there are too many so-called entertainments of the day to which children are permitted to go which have in them no element of education or fine sentiment of grace or beauty. Again there is, as one of the leading dailys puts it, "too much coddling of criminals" both juvenile and adults and the tion prevalence of the idea that there is no law in Massachusetts which reaches children while the contrary is a fact and it is not up to a citizen who has a business to look after or a job in the factory to put himself in position as a complainant to be summonsed from his business or work to go before the court every day as a witness. What is an officer for if not to round more promotor of hoodlumism in the same found it out.-Judge. dailys which criticise it. In one of those very papers which has a good article on one page, on another runs a rude caricature of one of our highest officials the very nature of of which would tend to lower any respect the careless thinker might have for law and order. There is much the daily might do to obviate the hoodlum | Journal difficulty by elevating the character of its illustration.

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powdercream of tartar, phosphate, and alum-and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

The relative percentage of the food digested is shown as follows:

Bread made with

Royal Cream of Tartar Powder: 100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with phosphate powder:

68¹/₄ Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

673/4 Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food faised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.

CHAPTER XI.

The Art of Dr. Jamieson,

EANING against the pillar of the gallery. Dunwody watched them all-old friends, late foes-depart. ▲ Josephine St. Auban stood not far away. He turned to her, and her gaze fell upon his face, now haggard and gaunt.

"You are ill," she said to him impulsively. "You're badly hurt." "Aren't you glad to see me suffer?"

he asked grimly. "I am not glad to see any one suffer." "Well, never mind about me. But now, you, yourself, didn't I tell you to go to your room and rest?" She was pale, the corners of her mouth were drawn, her eves were duller. Neither had she slept. She also suffered even now. Yet her courage matched his own. She smiled. "It makes me crawl all the way through to see a woman hurt that way. Why did you try to climb out of that window? You weren't walking in your sleep." "I was trying to get away from you. I thought you were coming. I thought I heard you-at the door." She looked him full in the face, searching it for sign of guilt, of confusion. "Was it not enough?" she added.

The frown on his face only deepened. "That was not true," said he. "I never came to your door. It was Sally you heard. I'll confess-I sent her to get away those-those clothes you saw. 1 didn't want-you to see them."

"I believe you," she said low, as if she spoke to herself. "Yes, I understand now. I was mistaken."

"How do you know? Why forgive me? I don't want you to forgive me. I am degraded forever."

"Tell me." she flashed out upon him suddenly, "what did you think then of broken wrist, but he - standing me there on the boat? How did you around"-

I only wanted you. I just couldn't a little fever and believed he would think of your going away, that was all. take a little quinine." I'd never seen a woman like you. I'll never hope to see another your equal in all my life. And you sent for me, dressed. Come"- He motioned Josetold me to come, said you needed help. I didn't know what you were. But 1 didn't care what you were either. I don't care now. I wanted you. I'll never in all my life cease to want you. "But what is the right thing to do now?" he resumed shortly. "Parole? Hostage? I don't need to tell you I'm the prisoner now. My future, my character, are absolutely in your hands. The fact that I have insulted a woman can be proved. It is with you what revenge you will take. As a lawyer, I point out to you that the courts are open. You easily can obtain redress there against Warville Dunwody. And your relatives or friends will of course hold me accountable." "Then you fear me?"

"No. What comes, comes. I am afraid of no one in the world but my own self. I fear only the dread of facing life-of looking about me here, in my own home, and not seeing, not hearing you. Tell me, when will your lawyers call on me?"

"What do you mean?" he demanded. "To let me off so easily? Oh, no."

"Never fear. You shall pay me ransom, and heavily, out of your own character. I shall exact it a hundredfold-in shame, in regret-of you. You love my body. You do not love my mind. I love them both. Yes, I am a student of the law. Humanity! Is it not larger than we? Is this narrow, selfish life of yours all you can see of life, of the higher law?"

"Yes," said Dunwody, grinning painfully. "I reckon maybe it was one of those 'higher law' abolitionists that shot me!" "Shot? What do you mean?" Even as she spoke she now for the first time revolver, which he laid upon the bed caught sight of the dark rimmed rent | beside him. in his trousers leg, noted the uneasy fashion in which he held his weight

"No; shot," he replied. "Shot right in here, through the edge of the bone. face. When I tripped and fell, there in the hall. I broke the bone short off. It was only nicked at first."

"And you have been standing here, talking to me, with that?" She stepped to him swiftly and placed a hand under his arm. "You must go in. Come. Can you walk?"

Through his nerves, racked as they were, there swept a flood of joy. more sweet than that of any drug. She put increase life. They passed through as much? Haven't you any idea of the door toward the foot of the stairs. duty in the world?"

Here she turned to him. "The pain is very great?" she in-

"I'll not learn! If this was the only way for me to meet you then I'll not regret a single thing I've done. I'll not! I'll not pay! It all comes back to me. Just what I said before. What couldn't we do, together? I need you. I need

"You must go to your room. You've been standing for an hour." "But I've been with you. I can't that I would exact my price of you in regret, in remorse." "You shall not have it in regret. I'll not regret. But I'm paying! See, I'm telling you you may go, that you must go-away from me." Eleazar proved a faithful messenger once more. Before the evening shadows had greatly lengthened three figures appeared at the lower end of the approach to Tallwoods mansion house. Jeanne, as usual looking out from their windows, saw these.

"It is the old man, madame," she commented. "And, yes, Monsleur le Docteur at last-thank the Bon Dieu! But one other-who is that?"

It was a very worn and weary doctor who presently swung out of his saddle at the gallery step. His clothing was stained with mud, his very shoulders drooping with fatigue. None the less he smiled as he held out his hand to Josephine.

"How is my patient?" he inquired. Plumb well, of course. And how about this new one-I thought I fixed him up before he came home. I've been grunting at Eleazar all the way. telling him it's all foolishness, my coming away out here-he could have fixed Dunwody's leg up, somehow. 1 suppose you know the old man's son. Hector. He came along for good measure. I reckon."

The young man referred to now advanced, made a leg and pulled a black forelock. He was a strapping youth. attired in the latest fashion of French St. Genevieve. He bowed to this lady; but at the same time he cast a glance at her French waiting maid.

"Mr. Dunwody has had a fall, here in the house," said Josephine. "He thinks he has broken the injured bone. I didn't know for a long time that he had been shot. He stood out here last night talking to me."

"Stood out here-talking to youwith his leg broken through-the front bone? Couldn't you have any mercy? You didn't have to use that "He did not tell me until the last "I don't think I had any conclusion. moment. He said he thought he had

"I did the best I could with it-out there in the dark, but it wasn't half phine to follow him to Dunwody's room. Eleazar had slunk away about the house, but Hector, left alone with Jeanne, improved the shining hour. He was a cooper and had a most excellent business, yonder at St. Genevieve. But the society of St. Genevieve-ah. well!

And so on, very swimmingly. Jamieson shook his head over the results of his first scrutiny. He turned to Josephine. "Have you ever seen anybody hurt?"

"I've been on two battlefields," said

she. "I've nursed a little." Dunwody turned to her a face whose eyes now were glazed with suffering. He nodded to Jamieson without any word. "Sally, get some hot water, quick!" called out Jamieson in the hall. "So. now, old man, let's see."

He stripped the covering quite down and bared the lower limb, removing the bandage which he had originally applied. For a moment he looked at the "Never at all," she answered at last, angry wound. Then he pulled back the covering and turned away.

> "Well, what is it?" cronked Dunwody hoarsely, half rising on his crumpled pillow. Jamieson did not reply. "If that leg were mine do you know what I'd do with it?"

> "No; but it isn't yours." "Well, I'd have it off as quick as it would come, that's all. If you don't you'll lose your life."

"You don't mean that?" whispered Dunwody tensely, after a time. "I mean every word I say. Its blood poisoning." The only answer his patient made was to reach a slow hand under his pillow and draw out a long barreled

"I didn't think you such a coward." ruminated Jamieson, rubbing his chin. "If you think I'm afraid of the hurt of it I'll let you do your work first and thought you only tired, or perhaps I'll do mine afterward," gasped Dun-

"Is it so bad as all that, doctor?" de manded Josephine. Her answer was a sad look from the gray old eyes. "Blood poison. Some kind of an aggravation.

It's traveling fast." Dunwody turned his gaze on Josephine now. "You don't belong here now." said he at length. "You'd better go away." "This is just where she does belong." contradicted Jamieson. "If she has her free arm under his, forgetful of courage to stay here I want her. I've everything in her woman's wish to got to have help. She'll do her duty allay suffering, to brood, to protect, to and with one hand tied. Can't you do than that, seen weaker men survive worse than that. There's a chance perhaps. Why don't you take it like a man? I exact it of you. I demand it. Your duty to me is unpaid. Come. We must live, all of us, till all our debts are paid."

He made no answer at first save to look her straight in the face for a moment. "Maybe there is such a thing as duty," said he. "Maybe I do owe it -to you. I've-not yet-paid enough. Very well, then."

"Come," cried out Jamieson suddenly, "out you go on the table. Get a hand under there, girl."

There was no word further spoken. Gently they aided the injured man to his feet and helped him hobble through the hall and into the great dining room beyond, where stood the long table of polished mahogany. Dunwody. swaying, leaned against it, while Jamieson hurried to the window and threw up the curtains to admit as much as possible of the light of late afternoon. Returning, he motioned Dunwody to remove his coat, which he folded up for a pillow. The remainder of his preparations necessarily were scant-hot water, clean instruments, that was all. An anaesthetic was, of course, out of the question.

"Dunwody, we're going to hurt you a little," said Jamieson at last. "You've got to stand it, that's all. Lie down there on the table and get

He himself turned his back and was busy nearby at a smaller table arranging his instruments. Next be went out to the front door and called aloud for Eleazar.

"Come here, man," commanded Jamieson after he had the old trapper in the room. "Take hold of this good leg and hold it still. Madam, I want you at the foot on the other side. You may get hold of the edge of the table with your hands, Dunwody, and hold still if you can. I won't be very long."

Swiftly the doctor cut away the garments from the wounded limb, which lay now exposed in all the horrors of its inflammation. The next instant there was a tense tightening of the muscles of the man on the table. There was a sigh of deep intaken breath, followed, however, by no more than a faint moan as the knife went at its work.

"I'm not going to do it!" came back from under the surgeon's arm. "There's half a chance-I'm going to try to save it! Held on, old man-here's the thing to do-we're going to try"-

He went down now into the quivering tissues and laid bare the edge of the broken bone, deep to the inner lines. Thus the front of the shattered bone lay exposed. The doctor sighed as he pushed at this with a steady finger, his eyes frowning, absorbed. The bullet wound in the anterior edge was not wound in the anterior edge was not clean cut. Near it was a long, heavy WEYMOUTH, MASS. New and Seasonable Goods added Every Week mation-something not suspected in the hurried dressing of the wound in the half darkness at the river edge. This bone end, but loosely attached, was broken free, thrust down into the angry and irritated flesh.

For an instant Jamieson studied the injury. The silence of death was in the room. The tense muscles of the patient might have been those of a lifeless man. Only the horrid sound of the dripping blood, falling from the table upon the carpet, broke the silence.

"I had a coon dog once." began Dr. Jamieson cheerfully. "I don't know whether you remember him or not, Dunwody. Sort of a yellow dog. with long ears and white eye. Just wait a minute." He hastened over to the side of the table and bent again over his case of instruments.

"There's been all kinds of coon dogs in these bottoms and hills, I suppose, ever since white folk came here, but. Dunwody. I'm telling you the truth, that dog of mine"-

By this time he had fished out from his case a slender probe, which he bent back and forth as he once more approached the table.

"There wasn't anything he wouldn't run, from deer to catamount, and one day, when we were out back here in the hills-I don't know but Eleazar here might remember something about that himself. * * * Hold on. now. old man!"

The old do tor's forehead for the first time was beaded. He wanted silment, in agony himself, he looked about; then a look of joy came to his face. An old fiddle was lying in the window. A moment, and he had ripped off a string.

Dr. Jamieson's story of his famous coon dog was never entirely completed. His voice droned away and ceased now as he bent once more over his work.

What he did, so far as he in his taclturn way ever would admit, was in some way to poke the catgut violin string under the bone, with the end of the probe and so to pass a ligature around the broken bone itself. After that it was easier to fasten the splinter back in place where it belonged.

"I'm only a backwoods doctor, Dunwody," said Jamieson at length as he began relandaging the limb, "But with what's at hand I've done the best I could. Wait now until I get some splints-hold still, can't you! It awhile I can do a better job than this. maybe. But now we have all done the best we could."

The face of Josephine St. Auban was wholly colorless as once more she assisted the doctor with his patient. They got him upon his own bed at ast. To Dunwody's imagination, although he could never settle it clearly in his mind, it seemed that a hand had pushed the hair back from his brow: that some one perhaps had arranged a pillow for him.

When at last Josephine found her own room she discovered her maid, Jeanne, waiting for her, fright still in her face.

"Madame," exclaimed Jeanne, "it is terrible. What horrors there are in this place. What has been done? Is it true that monsieur has lost both his legs? Is it not true how God punishes the wicked? For myself, I was in terror, even though I was some distance awry, and although that young gentleman, M. Hector, was so good as to hold my hand."

Glenwood Gas Ranges are built for service, and to give the utmost satisfaction to the user. In the first place, they weigh more and are put together more securely than most gas ranges. The castings are smooth, and easy to keep clean. Owing to their sturdy construction and fine workmanship, they will stand the intense heat and last much longer than the ordinary kind.

The Baking Oven is big enough to bake for the the largest family, and every square inch is heated exactly uniform.

The Linings of the Oven are made of white alumaloyd sheets, a new rust-resisting metal which does not scale, but keeps neat and smooth and lasts with the rest of the range. The bottom and side linings of both broiling and baking ovens are a bar-locking, removable type, securely fastened, but very easy to take out.

The Glenwood Patent Oven Heat Indicator is dependable, and what gas range users have long been looking for.

Facts Worth Knowing.

There are three entirely different kinds of ingredients used in making the three different varieties of baking powders on the market, viz:-(1) Mineral-Acid or Alum, (2) Bone-Acid or Phosphate, and (3) Cream of Tartar, derived from grapes. Haircut or Massage drop It is important, from the standpoint of health, to know something about these in- into our Up-To-Date shop gredients, and which kind is used in your baking powder.

(1) Mineral-Acid, or Alum, is made from a kind of clay. This clay is mixed with diluted oil of vitriol and from this solution a product is obtained which is alum. Alum is cheap, costs about two secured the services of cents a pound, and baking powder made John Bergh of Boston, who with this Mineral-Acid sells from 10 to 25

(2) Bone-Acid or Phosphate, is the basis of phosphate baking powders and the process is fully described in the patents issued to a large manufacturer of a phosphate powder. The U. S. Patent Office Reports give a full and exact description, but the following extract is enough:

"Burned bones, after being ground, are put into freshly diluted oil of vitroil and with continual stirring and in the following proportion," etc.

From this Bone-Acid Phosphate baking powders are made; such powders sell from 20 to 30 cents a pound.

(3) Cream of Tartar exists in all ripe the grapes are pressed. The tartar is subwith water, and refined, when crystals of Cream of Tartar, white and very pure, separate and are procured. It differs in no respect from the form in which it originally existed in the grape. Cream of Tartar, then, while the most expensive, is the only ingredient that should be used in a baking powder to act upon the soda, as its wholesomeness is beyond question. Cream of Tartar baking powders sell at about 40 to 50 cents a pound.

Such are the facts and every one, careful of the health of the family, should remember this rule:-Baking powders selling from 10 to 25 cents a pound are made of Mineral-Acids; those selling from 20 to 30 cents of Bone-Acid; and those from 40 to 50 cents of Cream of Tartar derived from grapes.

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court for Probate by Alessandro Luciano and Margherita Luciano, both of Weymouth, who pray that letters testamentary may be issued to them, the executors therein named, without giving a surety on their official bonds;

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Quincy in said County of Norfolk, on the eleventh day of June, A.D. 1913, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioners are hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Weymouth Gazette, a newspaper published in said Weymouth, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty first day of May in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirteen.

O, What A Change

There are some people in our town Who many years ago, Ate bread baked on the oven floor Which was not made for show.

And biscuits too, not baked in pans, But every part exposed; And by the heat's intensity

By just the sweetest kind of crust That any could desire; So perfect and so uniform

The biscuit was enclosed

Caused by a steady fire. But cream of tartar biscuits now You will find at our store;

If you will buy them once no doubt You will buy many more.

Arabian Honey. Arabian honey, which is frequently mentioned by historians as an important export from Aden in early times, is no longer an item in the export trade. Small quantities, however, continue to come from Mokalla, 400 miles east of Aden, and it is also exported from that place to India in small quantities. The decline in the honey and wax industry has been gradual for centuries, and is attributed to a diminution in the rainfall. The honey that comes to market in Aden is packed in gourds and goatskins and sometimes in hollow pumpkins.

Man Who Is Half Sick.

A physician recently remarked that "it was an awful punishment to be only slightly ill and have nothing to do." The man who is only half sick, if he has nothing to occupy his attention, soon grows morbidly introspective and his mind becomes filled with exaggerated ideas of his condition. Disease grows and flourishes under such conditions. Regular employment is conducive to health. Work keeps the blood active and the mind away from the physical condition.—Health.
